

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. "NEWSPAPERS PUBLISHED IN ILLINOIS PRIOR TO 1860,"
PUBLICATIONS OF THE ILLINOIS STATE HISTORICAL LIBRARY, VOLUME I., NO. 1,
BY
EDMUND JANES JAMES

PREFACE

As first planned, this work was to include by way of introduction a fairly comprehensive history of the periodicals and newspapers of the state. The bibliography grew beyond the expected size, and the historical material even more abundant; consequently the introduction has been made only a sketch, and is to be regarded as preliminary to a more thorough treatment of the subject. It is to be hoped, however, that even in this brief form it may indicate some of the many ways in which the ephemeral stuff of newspapers and periodicals is an important part of the literature and history of the commonwealth. That but a slight amount of this material is preserved, and that little of what is extant is accessible, are two unfortunate facts to be derived from the following pages. The library lists may prove a convenience to those who on occasion to consult files of early newspapers. If there be no other purpose, however, they may call attention to a slight amount of such material now in the safe keeping of fireproof library buildings, and may indirectly help to rescue from attics and storerooms the dwindling legacy that has been left for mice and flames.

The sources of the bibliography include practically all of the printed county histories and "biographical sketches" and some in manuscript; the proceedings of state, county, and city historical societies, histories of Illinois and of towns; gazetteers, early books of travels, memoirs, city directories, newspaper directories from 1856, fourteen hundred individuals, either through correspondence or through interviews, and the files of many of the publications. In many instances it has been well nigh, and in some quite, impossible to reconcile conflicts of statement, especially when no files of the publication concerned could be found. For instance, the desire of publishers to acquire long life for their papers has in some cases caused the papers to accrete age simultaneously at both ends of their careers. In the newspaper directories for 1871 to 1876, 1868 is given as the year in which a certain paper was established. By 1880 this date had receded to 1864, and, gaining momentum, by 1881 had gone to 1861. Sometimes these dates are changed arbitrarily; more often, though, antiquity is acquired by fastening paternity upon some preceding publication. This phenomenon has been a source of confusion, and probably of error. Possibly many papers are linked in series that have had no other than a chronological relation.

I wish to acknowledge my indebtedness to the large number of persons whom I cannot mention individually: editors, former editors, librarians, members of the State Historical Society, and others, who to the number of nearly fourteen hundred have contributed to the making of this compilation. Special acknowledgement is due President Edmund Janes James, of the University of Illinois; Mrs. Jessie Palmer Weber, Librarian of the State Historical

HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION

INTRODUCTION

PRELIMINARY

This introduction is the result of an effort to sketch the historical background for the disconnected bibliographic material which forms the body of this work. It is not intended as a history of the newspapers and periodicals of Illinois; but, as one of our county historians has said, newspaper business with us has been a "halcyon and idyllic proceeding," and some outline such as this may be needed to find the halcyon if not the vociferous in the history of our newspapers and periodicals. Especially it is purposed to deal with the beginnings in Illinois journalism and to a less extent to suggest the relation of the news to the manifold successive elements that have entered into the making of the state — population, transportation, commerce, politics, education, and other materials and means of economic and social development; and to record important tendencies and certain isolated facts not conveniently accessible elsewhere.

The conditions under which the first Illinois newspaper was established, in 1814, included many disadvantages which made any other than a meager and tenuous subsidy for it impossible. The population was small and widely distributed; the means of communication were merely primitive and frequently inoperative; and both money and labor were exceedingly scarce. That a newspaper started as early as 1814 was due not so much to business to political reasons: there was United States and territorial printing to be done; and the politicians of the territory, including a large proportion of the male population, were yearning toward statehood.

The population of the territory of Illinois had increased slowly until 1813, but with the cessation of Indian raids after the close of the war of 1812, and the passage of the pre-emption act of 1813, a new epoch in immigration began.¹ A land office was opened in Kaskaskia in 1814, and the influx of permanent settlers was much increased. The total population at that time may have been well toward twenty thousand, but it was thinly distributed. The village and vicinity of Kaskaskia, which in 1815 contained between seven hundred and one thousand persons, was least sparsely settled.² Gallatin, with Shawneetown as its chief village, was the most populous county on the east side of the territory. As late as 1818 it contained but thirty-two hundred persons.³ Shawneetown, where the second paper in the state was established, numbered between thirty and forty families.⁴

A fact that doubtless tended to hinder the beginning of newspapers in Illinois was the presence, on two sides of the populated area, of larger centers of population than any in Illinois: Vincennes on the east, and St. Louis on the west. In the first a newspaper had been established a full decade before the Illinois Herald was issued — so well established that it is still published; in the second the Missouri Gazette began, in 1808, a career which it has continued, under various names, to the present. Other papers helped to supply the needs of the Illinois settlers. In 1816 the citizens of Shawneetown gave notice through the papers of Kaskaskia, Frankfort (Kentucky), and Nashville (Tennessee), that they would apply to the legislature of Illinois for the establishment of a bank at that place.⁵ These papers, supported by a population of towns larger than any in the new territory doubtless delayed both the beginning and the spread of newspapers in Illinois.

Means of communication were meager, primitive, and did not function with either despatch or regularity. The earliest settlements were naturally on the waterways—the Wabash, Ohio, Mississippi, and Kaskaskia rivers. Roads or mail routes were opened until 1805. The first mail route was established in that year from Vincennes to Cahokia;⁶ the second from Vincennes to Shawneetown in 1806. In 1810 routes were established to St. Louis by way of Kaskaskia, Prairie du Rocher, and Cahokia; from Kaskaskia to Cape Girardeau, by way of St. Genevieve; from Louisville to Shawneetown; and in 1814 to Johnson Court House (now Vienna). Over these routes mail was carried regularly once or twice a week, except in bad weather, or when the roads were impassable.⁷ But it will appear later that even when the mail was regularly carried, the whole postal system was so bad that regularity and promptness in the arrival of expected mail were never assured.

The transportation of freight suffered even more serious vicissitudes than the distribution of the mail, and the prospective publisher of the first newspaper may well have found himself at some disadvantage in being as remote from the source of his supply of paper and equipment as was Kaskaskia.

kia from Cincinnati or Frankfort. All goods had to be carried down the Ohio on flatboats, and then poled up the Mississippi, or hauled overland by wagon. The rivers were frequently too high or too low for ease of navigation, and the roads frequently offered insuperable difficulties.

Such were some of the conditions in Illinois in 1814, when the first newspaper was established. Other circumstances and the changes that came with the growth of population will appear in the account of the papers of the first decade and later.

THE FIRST DECADE

The first period in the history of newspapers in Illinois, which begins with the founding of the Illinois Herald in 1814, closes naturally and conveniently with the momentous convention election held in August, 1824. In the first period of ten years five separate papers were established, and all continued until the election.

1. Illinois Herald, established at Kaskaskia in 1814; renamed Western Intelligencer in 1816; renamed Illinois Intelligencer in 1818; followed the state capital to Vandalia in 1820.
2. Illinois Emigrant, established in Shawneetown in 1818; renamed Illinois Gazette in 1819.
3. Edwardsville Spectator, established at Edwardsville in 1819.
4. Star of the West, established at Edwardsville in 1822; renamed Illinois Republican in 1823; discontinued at the time of the election in 1824.
5. Republican Advocate, established at Kaskaskia early in 1823; renamed Kaskaskia Republican in 1824; continued until 1825; revived early in 1826 as Illinois Reporter, and continued for about a year.

It appears from this list that Illinois had but one territorial newspaper, which bore at successive times three various names. With the coming of statehood in 1818, a rival party, and therefore a rival newspaper, was inevitable. As early as the twenty-ninth number of this second paper, dated January 9, 1819, the Emigrant indicated that two newspapers, although they were as far apart as the limits fixed by nature and population would permit, could not exist pacifically in Illinois.

The coming of the Illinois Emigrant indicated no shifting of the population; more significant was the advent of the Edwardsville Spectator in 1819. By this year the population of Madison County had increased to a number between four thousand and fifty-five hundred; Edwardsville, the county town, contained sixty or seventy houses, a courthouse, a jail, a bank, and a land-office. Alton, but a few miles away, had one hundred houses.⁸ The new capital on the upper Kaskaskia was already projected by land speculators. In the next year the seat of government was moved, and with it the Illinois Intelligencer, to Vandalia. The other papers of the period were significant only as parties to the convention struggle.

Throughout this period from 1814 to 1824 the country was developed rapidly to the northward. The population had grown by 1820 to 55,211.⁹ In 1814 there were nine post-offices in the territory, and three hundred and eighty-eight miles of post-roads.¹⁰ From that time both post-offices and post-roads increased greatly.¹¹ By 1819 a road was opened from Shawneetown, by way of Carmi to Albion, in Edwards County. In February, 1821, the legislature authorized the building of a turnpike road from the Mississippi opposite St. Louis, across the American Bottom to the bluffs. Edwardsville, Springfield, and Peoria were connected by a mail route in 1822; in the same year a road and a mail route were established between Vandalia and Springfield, over which the State Capital was soon to continue its migration to the northward.¹² In the same year also, a direct path was established from Iroquois Post (now Iroquois) to Danville. In 1824 this path was extended northward to Chicago, and southwest from Danville for one hundred and fifty miles,¹³ but no mail was carried over any part of this route until eight years later. Springfield was the northern terminus of the mail route early in 1823, and the next year Sangamon County was still almost entirely without ferries, bridges, or roads. Over most of these routes mail was carried once a week.

River transportation had developed rapidly through the introduction of the steamboat. The Orleans had gone down the Ohio from Pittsburg in 1811, the Washington in 1817. In 1817 the first steamboat to touch a port on the upper Mississippi reached St. Louis; Galena saw its first steamboat in 1822. This was the field, and these were the means of communication in which and by which the newspapers of the first decade served and were served. But the delay in the mail service and in the delivery of freight were so frequent and so prolonged as to be to-day almost incredible. Illinois Emigrant issued no number between June 23 and August 24, 1819, because paper shipped down the Ohio River June 13th was delayed by low water and did not arrive until more than two months later. If this delay was experienced by a paper nearest the source of supply and directed on the Ohio, more extended gaps might well be expected in the other early files. On June 21, 1823, the Illinois Gazette received through the post a New York Spectator of November 22, 1822, a Richmond Enquirer of December 1822, and a Frankfort Commentator of January 2, 1823. "Such is the wretched state of the mails west of the mountains, and complaints and remonstrances seem unavailing to improve it," remarked the editor. On this mail service the early western papers depended for their news of the outside world. Hall, in the Illinois Gazette, pictures the situation in 1821 thus:

¹¹ In 1821 there were fifty-seven post-offices, but in 1823 and 1825 only fifty three. Until after the first decade, Shawneetown did more postal business than any other town in Illinois, and in 1817 it was the only post-office in the state in which a clerk was employed. In 1821 it did twice as much as Edwardsville, and four times as much as Kaskaskia. See U. S. Official Registers or "Blue Books," for 1817-1825.

"After a lapse of several weeks (three months, to be exact) we are now enabled to resume the publication of our sheet. Paper (the want of which has been the cause of our late interruption) was shipped for us early last fall, on board of a boat bound for St. Louis — to which place, owing probably to the forgetfulness of the master, it was carried but has but just now come to hand. Our situation is such that our means so inadequate to guard against these occasional interruptions, by laying in large supplies of paper, ink, and other materials, at a time that we are more or less affected by every change in the elements, or defalcation in individual promises. High water and low water it seems are equally our enemies — the course is sure to delay the arrival of some article necessary to prosecution of our labors, while the other hurries something of which we stand in the most pressing need, down the current beyond our reach. And high winds, and warm and cold weather, equally delight to make us their sport. But we assure our subscribers that however much they may regret missing a paper for a week, they cannot regret it more than we; for, after all, we are the only losers." More than five years had been required to complete four volumes.

This uncertainty, especially in the freight service, lasted until long afterward. "You are doubtless waiting with some degree of impatience," wrote Hooper Warren to Ninian Edwards from Galena, July 6, 1829, "for the appearance of the Galena Advertiser. After waiting more than three weeks after my arrival, the materials from Springfield arrived from St. Louis. How they got there I have never learned. . . . When we were elated with the certainty of getting out the paper immediately, we were astonished to find that the keg of ink had been left behind! I put it into the wagon myself at Springfield with the other materials sent to Beardstown on the Illinois. Dr. Philleo started down the river immediately, which was three weeks ago last Saturday, to look for it. We heard from him by letter at the Lower Rapids on the 20th ult., at which time he had not found it, and was about to start down to St. Louis. We expect him by the next boat or stage."¹⁴ In the next year, publication of the Illinois Monthly Magazine at Vandalia, the state capital, was considerably delayed by the failure of paper to arrive, and editor Hall gave this difficulty in the matter of transportation as one reason for removing the publication to Cincinnati. "We feel no inconsiderable regret," wrote the editor of the Illinois State Gazette and Jacksonville News on January 17, 1835, "at being compelled to an occasional suspension of our publication (owing to a want of paper but the regret is lessened somewhat by the fact that every paper in the state, with perhaps a single exception, has suffered like disappointments." The News had then suffered a suspension of three weeks.

The general character of the newspapers of the period was political, the tone frequently controversial, but high moral and often religious. As newspapers they would to-day be regarded, even from the point of view of the courts, as weekly, as sad efforts. Of political news, either state or national, there was no lack, and the editors sometimes showed considerable enterprise in securing it; but of local news in the present sense there was very little. Occasionally some space was given to an account of an unusual murder in the vicinity, or an extraordinary rise or fall of the river but usually the remoteness of the event seemed to increase its importance, and one finds more often an account of hop yield in Silesia than of the wheat crop in Illinois. It was easier to reset items from the eastern papers, when they arrived, than to gather facts and compose original matter. This was especially true in the frequent periods when the politician who ran the paper was absent, and the work was left to the itinerant and bibulous printer.

The editorial occupied a variable, but on the whole, an important place. These first five papers had pretty definite purposes, forwarded or achieved largely by the direct application of the editorial, which, not infrequently in "parlous times of political conflict, filled one of the four small pages, and in a few instances overran even that ample room. Positive or controversial opinion was often expressed over an obvious but sufficient nom de plume, though quite as often the name of the editor was in itself a sufficient disguise for the individual or the interest behind the paper. Thus we find Sidney Breese writing to Governor Edwards: "If I continue engaged in politics, I am determined to make Gov. Reynolds choose between Smith and myself, in other words between the Crisis and the Democrat. Do give your views . . . editorially, thro' me, in the Democrat."¹⁶ Yet R. K. Fleming was nominally editor, the paper was referred to by Warren in the Galena Advertiser as "Fleming's paper," and not until almost a year later did suspicion appear in print that Breese was the actual editor. John McLean, in the Illinois Gazette for July 29, 1820, called Ninian Edwards the "actual editor of the Edwardsville Spectator," nominally, and in fact, edited by Hooper Warren; and we find abundant evidence in Warren's letters to Edwards¹⁷ that in editing his papers Sangamo Spectator and Galena Advertiser, Warren was continually under the influence of Edwards. Yet Warren was one of the strongest and most independent of the early editors, of quite a different sort from Fleming, and the yoke of obligation was burdensome to him.¹⁸

While in such cases the nominal editor was the spokesman for some one else, there were other cases in which editorial utterances were disguised by means of an assumed name. Signed contributions occupied a large and important place in the early papers, as they have done, and still do, in knowledge of the subject, which would rather make me appear ridiculous than otherwise." ²⁰

Much of the space afforded by the lack of news was filled with "literature." "Want of room alone," explains one of the earliest editors, ²¹ "has prevented us from fulfilling an intention which we had early formed, of devoting a portion of our columns to literature. Our own resources at this insulated spot, where we can calculate on but little assistance and where we seldom receive new books, must of course be small; but the columns of many of the Eastern papers are tastefully variegated with those lighter productions which delight the fancy, and on them we may sometimes draw, for the amusement of our readers. But among our friends and neighbors there are, no doubt, many who might contribute something towards the amusement and instruction of others." And indeed, to the many cultural excerpts from the tastefully variegated columns were added stories, poems, and essays by friends and neighbors. John Russell, Morris Birkbeck, and James Hall wrote often for those earliest papers, and made of them sources not to be overlooked by those who would know the early agriculture, horticulture, society, education, and politics, as well as literature of Illinois. Out of the somewhat haphazard occasional use of this kind of material in the first papers there grew a well established custom of devoting certain columns to such matter, a custom that has persisted even to the present in some localities. These earlier productions, however crude, had individuality, vigor, and genuineness not to be found in the sapless tabloid material now supplied in plates at a dollar and a quarter a page.

The business of publishing a newspaper in the early days was poor enough at best, and the publisher had a hard struggle to make a living. The initial cost of a plant was small and the expense of maintenance was low, but the sources of income were correspondingly meager. Had there been public printing and no politicians who felt the need for "organs," probably no early paper could have lived a year for the subscribers were few and the advertisements yielded little income.

The first cost of establishing a plant seems to have varied from four hundred to a thousand dollars, according to the amount of type the publisher felt necessary. The cost of maintenance was small. In many instances one man did all the work; seldom were more than two employed on one paper. Usually, it seems, a lawyer or other ambitious person wishing to start a paper found a printer, furnished the plant, editorials, and some of the news, and left the printer to solicit advertising, gather "items," make selections of news and "elegant miscellany" from the exchanges, set type, and "run off" and deliver the paper.

Public printing was a boon to the three earliest papers and no doubt did much to prolong their careers beyond their average length. This was especially true of the first and the most successful, which was established at an opportune time. There was a great and growing territory rapidly being settled by ambitious pioneers; there was an increasing body of laws, with no newspaper in which to print them; there was the United States printing patronage to be secured as well as the official job-work. A law in force May 21, 1811 declared that "whereas, it is provided . . . that advertisements should be inserted in some public newspaper published in the territory . . . ; and whereas, there is at the time no newspaper printed in this territory:"²² such advertisements should be inserted in "some of the newspapers published in the Louisiana Territory." The act was to remain in force "until a newspaper is established and published in this territory and no longer."²³

The privilege of printing the United States laws was of relatively great value and was eagerly sought. An act to authorize the publication of the laws in two newspapers in each territory was passed but three or four months after the first paper in Illinois was established.²⁴ In 1818 the number of papers to be favored was increased to three, and the matter to be published was made to include not only the laws, but resolutions, public treaties, and amendments to the constitution.²⁵ By this act the compensation was fixed at the rate of one dollar for each printed page of the pamphlet in which the copy was furnished, a page not far from the size of standard law books to-day.

The minimum number of subscribers on which a paper could be run, seems to have been fixed by Hooper Warren when he wrote to Ninian Edwards in 1828 that the Sangamo Spectator had but 170 subscribers, of which probably a third would withdraw when the year was up, and that nothing could sustain the paper but new type and its enlargement. Four hundred subscribers were considered a satisfactory number, although one finds vain boasting here and there that with proper help from all friends this or that paper could increase its list to a thousand.

²² This conclusively corrects Reynolds' statement that the Illinois Herald was established in 1809, an error handed down to the present time. (See Boggess, Settlement of Illinois, 1775-1830, p. 132, for the latest instance.)

²⁴ Approved November 21, 1814.

²⁵ Act approved April 20, 1818. The number of papers to be used in each state and territory was changed to two in 1846; the practice was discontinued in March, 1875. The amount of income derived from this source varied. The first Official Register to give the names of the printers of the laws and the amounts that they were paid (that of 1833) gives $177.00 for the first session and $91.00 for the second. These amounts were much smaller than those paid previously. An incidental benefit accrued from official favor. There was much printing to be done for the Department of State and of War and the Post Office Department, and the newspaper publishers often received from such sources two or three times the amount paid for publishing the laws.

Advertisements were few, seldom filling one-fourth the paper, and the rates were low. Of these early advertisements, those of taverns, whiskey, town-sites, and runaway negroes are found most frequently. The last named are found in surprising numbers, not only in the first decade, but on down to the Civil War, many bearing the little woodcut of a negro with his bundle which so impressed Miss Martineau, and nearly all offering a reward of one cent for the fugitive's return. Prospectuses of new papers, and advertisements of eastern, especially Washington, papers were numerous. These, together with notices of Philadelphia, New York, and Boston magazines grew in frequency until the middle of the century, when the use of the telegraph began to shift the whole newspaper situation.

Subscribers and advertisers would have been of more value to the struggling publishers if they had paid, but very often they didn't pay. In the case of nearly all early papers the subscription price if paid in advance was a dollar lower than if paid at the end of the year, but from the frequent appeals for money on account, one surmises that the subscribers found a way to save more than the one dollar. They were appealed to in prose and in verse, they were cajoled, praised, lectured, and denounced. Money was wretchedly scarce, but almost any commodity was acceptable. A full list of what the printers offered to receive would be an interesting ventory of the daily needs of the pioneer. The publishers of the Illinois Gazette announced that they would receive in payment of subscriptions, clean linen and cotton rags; in payment for subscriptions and advertisements, bacon, tallow, beeswax, and feathers. Later, hides, deerskins, and pork were also acceptable. Had there been no laws to be printed and no politicians to have organs, however, even prompt payment of subscription and advertising accounts would hardly have kept the papers alive, or have brought about the somewhat surprising fact that in the first decade no Illinois paper died through lack of support.

The climax of this first period was reached in the convention campaign which began in February, 1823, and ended on the first Monday in August, 1824. The newspapers had a more important place in that contest than in any other important political event in Illinois. They were owned or controlled by leaders in the fray, and in the columns of the few that are left one can follow the shifts of ownership and editorship, the shading off or brightening up of this or that aspect of the main question or of contributory questions, can catch the tense earnestness of spirit with which the opponents struggled, and get much of the violence of invective and abuse which one finds nowadays nowhere except in a municipal campaign.

From the beginning until well on in 1822 the papers were divided mainly on local issues and on men. The slavery question was already looming, but not large, though there had been more or less discontent ever since the passage of the Missouri Compromise, and the parties to the coming struggle were becoming defined. "The anti-convention party," says Governor Ford,²⁷ . . . "established newspapers to oppose the convention; one at Shawneetown, edited by Henry Eddy; one at Edwardsville, edited by Hooper Warren, with Gov. Coles, Thomas Lippincott, George Churchill, and Judge Lockwood, for its principal contributors; and finally, one at Vandalia, edited by David Blackwell, the Secretary of State. The slave party had established a newspaper at Kaskaskia, under the direction of Mr. Kane and Chief Justice Reynolds; and one at Edwardsville edited by Judge Smith; and both parties prepared to appeal to the interests, the passions, and the intelligence of the people. The contest was mixed up with much personal abuse; and now was poured forth a perfect lava of detraction, which, if it were not for the knowledge of the people that such matters are generally false or greatly exaggerated, would have overwhelmed and consumed all men's reputations . . . The whole people, for the space of eighteen months, did scarcely anything but read newspapers, handbills and pamphlets, quarrel, argue, and wrangle with each other." It is a source of wonder that long after these events had passed Governor Ford could record that but one duel had been fought in Illinois.²⁸

The Edwardsville Spectator was the first paper in the state to come out against slavery in Illinois, and to oppose all measures and men that seemed to favor a change in the direction of slavery. The paper was probably controlled by Ninian Edwards; it was the mouthpiece of a coterie of strong men, and under Hooper Warren's editorship it pursued a steady and consistent policy that made it the most influential paper in the state. Until early in 1824 it was alone in its opposition to any encroachments of slavery interests. Other papers were less stable, shifted policies, and until late in the campaign did not assume the positions which they were in at the close.²⁹

The Illinois Gazette favored the convention, but was so near the fence, and gave space to such free discussion of both sides, that writers on this bit of Illinois history have given accounts of its position in direct conflict with each other. A somewhat extended statement of the paper's position is given here in an effort to settle the question. Governor Ford has said that the Gazette was against the convention; Governor Coles, that it was for it.³⁰ These two authorities have been the source of endless conflicting statements, and other contemporary writers, like Hooper Warren and George Flower, have contributed. In his History of the English Settlement in Edwards County, Flower asserts, and offers substantial proof, that the paper was pro-convention, while the editor, E. B. Washburne, furnishes the information in a foot-note, that Eddy, editor of the Gazette, was against the convention.

Henry Eddy and A. W. Kimmel conducted the Gazette until May 22, 1820, when their partnership was dissolved and James Hall became Eddy's partner and the editor. Hall at once acknowledged his ignorance of Illinois politics and chose a neutral course for his paper. This course he reaffirmed, when, in printing a letter from Daniel P. Cook relative to some political charges, Hall said editorially, "We tions," said the editor, "will, in all probability, be used to procure a call for a convention to reconsider the important provision, in our constitution, against slavery. . . . Good cause must be shown before the people will consent to a proposition so pointedly opposed to their former sentiments. Let those who advocate the measure exhibit their manifesto, that the people 'may the better judge.' Our Gazette is at the service of all who choose to make it the medium of temperate discussion, on this or any other subject, except such as involve the deadly rancour of political parties and partisans, or the more baneful and unforgiving hate of theological dogma. At present we shall take no part in the slave question, reserving the right to enter the lists at a future opportunity, should we so determine."

Six months later Hall became involved in an acrimonious political dispute with Daniel P. Cook, who was a close political friend of Eddy, and a schism arose which resulted in the dissolution of the partnership of Hall and Eddy in November. No matter touching on slavery appeared until March, when an account of a meeting held at Jonesboro told that Alexander P. Field introduced a resolution which proposed an effort to elect members of the legislature who would recommend a convention for altering and amending the constitution. There was no editorial comment, and no mention of slavery. On March 8, Eddy strongly reprobated the seating of Shaw, but, unlike Berry, made no reference to slavery. Berry's "Extraordinary Legislative Proceedings"³³ was reprinted from the Illinois Intelligencer without criticism. From March, 1823, until August, 1824, the columns of the Gazette were crowded with communications on the convention and the slavery questions. In that period Birkbeck's Jonathan Freeman letters were printed and other articles on the same side. No one of these was left unanswered by the opponents, but the paper kept almost clear of the controversy, only once venturing to express the prevailing opinion of that part of the state. In the following editorial, printed June 14, 1823, the Gazette, according to George Flower, "showed the cloven hoof".

"The vote of the last legislature, recommending the case of a new convention, seems to have produced a good deal of excitement in the western part of the state, and to have called forth already some pretty warm discussion. In this quarter, as yet, we have heard but little said on the subject, owing probably to the great degree of unanimity which prevails in favor of the measure. The people in this part of the state (in this and adjoining counties particularly) have too great an interest at stake in keeping up the manufacture of salt at the saline, to be easily diverted from the course they intend to pursue by making the question turn upon the propriety or impropriety of introducing negro slavery. They are persuaded that unless the time can be enlarged, during which the slaves of the neighboring states can be hired to labor at the furnaces, the works, after the year 1824, must be abandoned, and this main source of revenue to the state be lost; besides all the advantages which they individually derive from the market, which, when in operation, those works create. The people in this part also, in common with others in all parts of the state, desire an amendment of the constitution in other particulars wherein it has been found defective, and many (we are far from concealing it) are in favor of the introduction of slavery, either absolute, as it exists at present in the slave-holding states, or in a limited degree — that is to say, to exist until the children born after its admission shall arrive at a certain age, to be fixed by the constitution."⁸⁴

When Coles secured control of the Intelligencer, the Gazette remarked, "Notwithstanding we have a high respect for the former editors, and the manner in which they executed their editorial functions, we cannot but hope that the Intelligencer will henceforth be conducted in a course, so as not to warrant any person in saying it disgusts the community."⁸⁵ The situation is most clearly revealed in one sentence printed August 7. The Gazette had vigorously supported Cook as candidate for Congress in opposition to Bond, although Cook was a strong anti-slavery man. No doubt the enmity which Eddy incurred by doing all in his power to defeat the pro-slavery Bond caused many supporters of the convention to regard Eddy as opposed to them on that proposition also. But that his loyalty to Cook in no wise influenced his sympathy for the convention is fairly indicated in his remark of August 7: "The convention question is lost — principally, we believe, from the effort made by Governor Bond's friends to force him upon its supporters, against the declared preference of Mr. Cook."

It is clear from the pages of the paper itself that the Gazette favored the convention. But it is more obvious that Eddy opened his columns freely to both parties in the discussion, that he was as nearly non-committal as an editor well could be, and that his course was in striking contrast with that of Hooper Warren and his Spectator on one hand, and Theophilus Smith and the Illinois Republican on the other.

⁸⁵ May 29, 1824.

The Illinois Intelligencer, before the beginning of the fight, was inclined to ignore the slavery question; its owners up to February 15, 1823, Wm. H. Brown and William Berry, were on opposite sides. In the number for February 15, however, there appeared a scathing editorial, entitled "Extraordinary Legislative Proceedings," denouncing the legislature³⁶ for its playing fast and loose with the Pike County members in order to gain the one vote necessary to call for a ballot on the convention. To this editorial William Berry appended a note. "The above 'extraordinary legislative proceedings' have been published by my partner, Wm. H. Brown, Esq., without my approbation, and shall be answered next week." In the issue for the next week Robert Blackwell's name replaced Brown's, and signed editorials from all three participants set forth their respective views. Under Blackwell and Berry the paper was less partizan, but was friendly to the convention faction.³⁷

At some time between March 19 and May 7, 1824, Berry disposed of his interest nominally to David Blackwell,

though Governor Coles was the real buyer.⁸⁸ With this change the Intelligencer became an active opponent of the convention; David Blackwell in his "prospectus," printed May 14, asserted that he would give his uniform opposition to the convention. And he did so.

The Illinois Republican and the Republican Advocate (later the Kaskaskia Republican) were less permanent elements in the early newspaper field, and did little more than contribute to the campaign discussions of 1823-24. The Illinois Republican at Edwardsville was established by a Pennsylvanian named Miller, and his son. Their coming was opportune; a paper to oppose the Spectator was much desired, and a group of citizens, including Theophilus W. Smith, furnished some necessary money to aid the undertaking. From the beginning the paper favored the pro-slavery party; when the convention campaign opened, it passed into the hands of Thomas J. McGuire and Company, and became the organ of the convention party,⁸⁹ with Smith as virtual editor, aided by William Kinney, West, and others. Smith was a smooth, graceful, and plausible writer. His articles were polished and of considerable literary merit, but he was not the equal of his rival, Hooper Warren. No other papers in the campaign fought at such close quarters, or with such direct personal animosity and bitterness as these two at Edwardsville. Yet the editors went only once outside of their editorial columns and their offices to flay their opponents. Their pens were facile and forcible.

The Republican Advocate was established at Kaskaskia by Elias Kent Kane and Governor Reynolds, at first under the nominal editorship of Robert K. Fleming, the printer; in January, 1824, in the heat of the campaign in which the paper supported the convention party, it was transferred to William Orr. Orr renamed it Kaskaskia Republican in March, 1824, and continued the paper until early in 1825, but the collapse of his cause deprived him of most of his support. In reviving his journal in 1826 under the title of Illinois Reporter, Orr remarked philosophically that he had been "taught by experience that his course in the political field should not be permitted to transcend the limits of temperate remark," and added, with something further of philosophy, that "extreme violence in political discussions, or unrestrained vituperation of those with whom we cannot coincide in matters of opinion, should not be indulged in."

⁸⁸ Washburne, Sketch of Governor Coles, 167.

How much the newspapers affected the results of the campaign can hardly be estimated. Two out of the five were against the convention, and the convention was defeated; but in three of the four counties in which the papers were published, the convention faction won. St. Clair County voted against the convention, 506 to 408, and the result has been credited very largely to the vigorous efforts of the Spectator; Fayette County returned 125 for to 121 against; in Gallatin, where Eddy made his timid stand, 597 for to 133 against showed the temper of the southeast section of the state; in Randolph 357 were for and 284 against the proposal.

The engine of the press finished the first period of its career under forced draft and high pressure, as it were. In the columns of these pioneer papers the early life of the state lies revealed frankly and realistically. The editors or contributors included nearly all the leaders in public life, and like the leaders, the papers were strongly partizan.

But the partizanship was obvious and sincere; the earnestness with which either party advocated its cause is still refreshing; and in this earnestness with which the charge was made and repulsed and the countercharge brought forth, there are the simplicity and the strength of the pioneers of a great commonwealth. When the campaign was over the papers lost their strongest writers and much of their patronage. One was discontinued; the others entered the next period weakened in character and in influence.

FROM 1824 TO 1840

The period from 1824 to 1840, although somewhat arbitrarily limited, extends from the great convention contest to the most exciting presidential campaign, relative to newspaper activity, before 1860. It is also a formative period, in which almost every subsequent phenomenon of increase, congregation, and distribution of population was begun or indicated; and in which several types of periodicals were introduced.

In 1824 nearly the whole of the northern two-thirds of the state was included in five counties. The military bounty land tract was divided between Pike and Fulton; Sangamon, Fayette, and Edgar included their present territories and all that part of the state to the north of them and south of the Illinois river and the lower edge of Lake Michigan. By 1840, though fifteen counties were set apart subsequently, the county organization was practically what it is today.⁴⁰

The chief movement of population in the early part of the period was the rapid peopling of the valley of the Illinois river, of the prairies of the central part of the state, and of the Fever river lead region in the vicinity of Galena.⁴¹ The greatest immigration into Central Illinois occurred in 1827 and 1828; from the end of the Black Hawk War until the financial disturbances in 1837 there was rapid growth along the Illinois river. Springfield, which was established in 1819, had a population numbering between six hundred and eight hundred in 1830; Jacksonville was of about the same size. The population of Sangamon County at that time was over forty-two thousand; that of the military tract was about thirteen thousand; Adams County was the most thickly settled district in that now populous area, and Quincy, the county town, contained perhaps two hundred persons. Peoria, whose first permanent settlers arrived in 1819, grew with great rapidity. Peoria County had been organized in 1825 with a population of twelve hundred thirty-six; Galena counted a population of about two thousand, and the county more than twice that number. After 1834 the objective point for immigrants to Illinois was Chicago, where many stayed, and from which point the whole northern part of the state was peopled. This movement was checked by the financial depression beginning in 1837, but revived again in 1842.

Transportation facilities improved rapidly. Steam navigation on the Illinois river began in 1828, and on Lake Michigan in 1832. By 1830 nearly every important point in Illinois could be reached in a reasonably short time, since steamboats departed almost daily for all Illinois points along the Mississippi, and others plied up and down the Illinois.

Roads, also, were improved and extended.⁴² In 1824 a stage line led from St. Louis to Vincennes;⁴³ by 1830 trips were made three times a week over this route, touching Belleville, Lebanon, Carlyle, Maysville, and Lawrenceville.⁴⁴ A stage went once a week from St. Louis to Vandalia by way of Edwardsville and Greenville; and once a week to Galena by way of Edwardsville, Springfield, and Peoria. In 1836 a line of wagons was established between Chicago and Kankakee, where connection was made for the Illinois river; three years later a stage line operating between Chicago and Galena made the trip in two days.

Four newspapers survived the convention campaign, to connect the preceding with the period now being considered. To these were added one hundred and fifteen new journalistic ventures, and thirty-one others that belong to a most difficult class, based on a sort of incorporeal hereditament; papers with new names or old names, but related more or less mythically with preceding publications. An attempt to follow the wandering titles and peripatetic subscription lists of many of these early papers carries the investigator too near the psychical for any practical purposes of record. However, of these one hundred and sixty that had existence in these sixteen years, but fifty-two remained for the census enumerator in 1840, several of which were but temporary campaign sheets.⁴⁵

⁴³ Davidson and Stuvé, History of Illinois, 352.

The geographical distribution of the papers established in this period is of much significance. Whereas in the first decade no paper was projected in territory farther to the north than Vandalia, two years later the Miner's Journal appeared at Galena, two hundred miles northward; in the next year the Sangamo Spectator was established at Springfield; Jacksonville followed in 1830 with the Western Observer, Alton in 1832 with the Spectator, and Chicago with the Democrat in 1833. Add to these the Chronicle and Bounty Land Advertiser, begun at Beardstown in 1833, the Enquirer, set up in the same year at Danville, on the eastern edge of the central belt of the state, the Illinois Champion and Peoria Herald in the north central section, 1834, and the Bounty Land Register, begun in 1835 at Quincy, on the extreme western side, and the limits of distribution have been reached. What remained now was but the filling in of the spaces between these remote points, and much of this was accomplished within the period.

The filling-in process was urged to abnormal activity by the grand internal improvement scheme. No fewer than nineteen newspapers were established in towns along the Illinois river and the canal route, including Alton and excluding Chicago, between 1836 and 1840. But as no part of the state was left out of this comprehensive scheme, papers grew, declined, and died in all parts of the state. Yet aside from the impetus of the improvement scheme there was the spirit of the time that made for recklessness. Immigration and speculation were abnormally augmented, settlers were pouring into the state, town sites were being laid out on all sorts of theories of future development. A contemporary editor has given an explanation of the newspaper situation that doubtless is true.

“The establishment of newspapers appears to be a leading characteristic of the present age. So great is the rage for getting up papers, that the patronage necessary for their maintenance is thought a secondary consideration, if, indeed, it is not deemed of too little consequence to elicit even a passing enquiry. Is there a town or city in embryo, with its plat designated, its streets and alleys, and public grounds marked out, having within its bounds some half a dozen houses, a tavern, a store, and a blacksmith shop?—its crowded population and wealth and greatness are seen in perspective, and a press is wanted, the sacrifice of some poor printer is demanded, to magnify its beauties, extenuate its faults, transform its very evils into blessings, and give assurance to the world of, not what it is, but what it is to be. Is there a little village, with its political parties or factions in array?—the one must have its paper to promulgate its doctrines and vindicate its rights; and anon the opposing party, having in their imagination great principles and important interests at stake, must also have its organ through which it can be heard, that the encroachments of contending power may be stayed. Is there a wealthy and ambitious demagogue, grasping for office as the only means of obtaining a short-lived and perchance an unenviable distinction?—the press is the great lever by which he is to consummate his wishes. Is there a lawyer, brief in years, brief in legal acquirements, with professional prospects briefless, the press is the fulcrum upon which his last hope for political preferment is based — the all-powerful engine by which he is to elevate himself to the summit of his imaginary glory, to the highest goal of his ambitions,—and straight the learned Theban mounts the editorial tripod, and with more than sibylline gravity utters forth his oracles of political wisdom to a benighted world."⁴⁶

The presidential campaign of 1840 brought into being a large number of papers. Of the seventeen established in 1839, six may reasonably be considered campaign ephemera, which were discontinued in 1840 or 1841, or, finding evidence of permanent support, changed their titles to indicate their altered character. In 1840 such papers as Sucker, Spirit of '76, Sovereign People, Illinois Free Trader, Old Hickory, and Old Soldier were started merely as campaign sheets; and there were at least twelve others primarily of the same character. Sixteen of the thirty new or refurbished down-state papers established in 1840 ended with the campaign or within the following year.

In tone the papers were not materially different from those of the preceding period. There were, to be sure, a good many very poor sheets, of a colorless, neutral tone, the forerunners of the abject bread-getters, never exalted to the dignity of bread-earners, which became widely prevalent in the decade from 1870 to 1880. But more of the papers were run by men of backbone and brains — proportions varying. Politics continued to be the primary interest, and the political tone was nothing softened since 1824. No presidential contest in Illinois produced more violent newspaper utterances than that of 1840. It was a campaign especially to the taste of the settlers in the young, crude state, and the inhabitants entered the lists without reserve, and with sufficient vocabularies. Witness this following, from ⁴⁶ Illinois State Gazette & Jacksonville News, May 9, 1835. The promptness with which newspapers were set up in incipient villages is well illustrated in the case of Grafton. The first settlers built their cabins in 1832, streets were laid out in 1836, and John Russell published the Backwoodsman there in 1837.

A practical amalgamator, his vice!

A Taney Federalist in the chair of Marshall.

A Secretary of the Treasury whose financial blunders would disgrace a schoolboy!

An Attorney General who has yet to learn the first rudiments of political honesty!

A servile Senate fawning at the footstool of Puss's throne!

Hodge was not a fair representative of the Illinois newspaper men of his day, perhaps, but however the papers differed in degree, they were alike in being strong party organs, one-sided, and never independent.

The strong bias that seemed to be demanded of the newspapers of the time, the bias that fed the party or factional spirit, at the same time reduced the power of the papers. "Newspapers at present have but little influence," wrote Hooper Warren in 1828.⁴⁷ "The readers are few, and these are taught to believe that all that appears in a newspaper is a lie, of course." At this same time De Tocqueville remarked the small influence of American papers,⁴⁸ and Harriet Martineau had never heard any one deny the profligacy of newspapers in general, or that the American were the worst. Why "the republic has not been overthrown by its newspapers"⁴⁹ Miss Martineau might have learned from Hooper Warren.

Though the newspaper readers were few from the point of view of an unsuccessful editor, the ratio of newspapers to population was large, as the following table will show, and their influence was without doubt greater than the discouraged editor of the Galena Advertiser believed.

In the following statistical view of the publishing industry in the state in 1840, presented in the census report for that year, two items require comment. The four periodicals assigned to Jo Daviess County it seems impossible to identify. There were but two towns of any consequence in the county at that time, and neither, so far as available materials show, supported a periodical other than a newspaper. The same difficulty attends the daily paper in Schuyler County. Possibly the Rushville Political Examiner was issued daily in the heat of the campaign.

⁶⁰ These figures are from Mitchell, Illinois in 1837, and are probably estimated.

Throughout the first half-century of our newspaper history the weekly papers were all these things to all men; each presented a symposium of politics, agriculture, morals, mechanics, science, and literature — something to please each member of the family, indeed. But the idea of special types was present very early, and found concrete habilitment in several premature publications. As early as 1829 a religious paper was started; in the next year appeared an agricultural journal, the second west of the Alleghanies, and a monthly literary magazine. The first harbinger of the flock which was to spread the Washingtonian movement abroad in the state came in 1836; in 1837 an educational monthly endured a brief life of neglect. In the next year a paper was started at Edwardsville to promulgate a universal language. Finally, ambitious Chicago produced in 1839 the first daily paper in the state, and in 1840 the second. It should be noted too, that the two oldest papers in Illinois to-day look back to this period for their beginnings. Most of these pioneers in special fields require here a word of comment.

Religious journalism, which has been important numerically since the middle of this period, began with the Pioneer of the Valley of the Mississippi, established at Rock Spring by John Mason Peck and T. P. Green, and first issued on April 25, 1829. It was a private venture, and Baptist. Baptist journalism in Illinois has been, from the beginning, wholly a matter of private enterprise in contrast with that of Ohio and Michigan, among the western states.⁵¹ The idea of the Pioneer originated with Peck, who felt that his Baptist seminary, and the state, needed the stimulus that a weekly paper would give. He found a Rev. T. P. Green willing to furnish half enough money to start the venture, and to act as publisher. The rest of the funds Peck secured from eastern Baptists, who, no doubt, at Peck's suggestion, stipulated that half of the profits should go to the seminary. Peck was editor, and in his travels solicited subscriptions. But the paper was a dead expense from the beginning;⁵² the Rev. Mr. Green soon starved out, and was succeeded by a Mr. Smith, son-in-law of Mr. Peck. In June, 1836, the office was moved to Alton, where it was a distressing burden to its originator until January, 1839, when it was combined with the Baptist Banner of Louisville, Kentucky.

That an attempt was made to establish a pretentious literary monthly in Illinois in 1830 provokes astonishment paralleled only by the wonder that the attempt was carried two years toward success. James Hall, lawyer, writer, circuit judge, state treasurer, editor of the Illinois Emigrant from 1820 to 1822, of the Illinois Intelligencer from 1829 to 1832, trustee of Illinois College, writer of fiction, literary biography, and commercial statistics, vehement politician and maker of many enemies — this versatile Pennsylvanian established the Illinois Monthly Magazine at Vandalia, October, 1830, and published it there for two years. Illinois had been a state but twelve years, and contained more horse-thieves in the southern and Indians in the northern sections than litterateurs in both. Yet here was this hopeful voice calling out from Vandalia to the people of Illinois for articles on subjects literary, scientific, cultural — for fiction and for poetry — and for appreciation in coin of the realm. It had nearly a score of predecessors in the Ohio valley,⁵⁸ including The Medley (1803), Western Review (1820) and Transylvanian (1829) at Lexington, Kentucky; Cincinnati Literary Gazette (1824), Western Monthly Review (1828), Sentinel and Star in the West (1829), and Olio, at Cincinnati, the western publishing center of that time. Of these predecessors to Hall's venture, Olio (1821-22) is of interest here because one of its editors was Samuel S. Brooks, who became one of the most active and trenchant of early editors in Illinois. The greater age and population of the communities in which these early attempts were made, as compared with the village capital of Illinois, make Hall's venture seem the more hazardous.

Yet Hall's purpose was largely practical. "The leading features of our humble attempt," the editor explained in the preface to his first number, "will be to disseminate knowledge, to cultivate a taste for letters, and to give correct delineations of this country to our distant friends. . . . Every topic connected with the arts, the industry, or the resources of this flourishing state, or of the western country, will come within the scope of this work. . . . But while we propose to give a prominent place to the useful, it is not our intention to neglect the lighter and more elegant branches of literature. Original tales, characteristic of the western people, are promised, and we think that our arrangements in this department are such, that the lovers of ingenious fiction will not be disappointed. Literary intelligence will form a portion of each number." Something further of Hall's ideal was expressed in the seventh number, when, in the course of an article on "Periodicals," the editor wrote, "Our editors have become too formal, and stately, and fastidious. . . . Instead of the infinite variety of topics, which once gave interest to works of this description, nothing is now admitted but reviews, tales, and poetry. . . . I am much better pleased with the good old-fashioned magazines . . . within whose well furnished pages, the reader, whatever might be his taste, was sure to find something agreeable."

Such, indeed, was the character of the Illinois Monthly Magazine, for performance followed close on purpose, and Hall gathered in those two ambitious volumes a quantity, quality, and variety of matter creditable indeed. He drew on his own resources heavily—he contributed nearly one-half of all that he printed. And he drew at the same time on all other available resources in the state, and soon exhausted them.

The energetic citizens of Alton, which at that time was almost the equal of Chicago in population, furnished the first organ of temperance reform, when on June 1, 1836, the Illinois State Temperance Society published there the first number of the Illinois Temperance Herald. The paper never received from subscriptions and advertisements a support sufficient to maintain it, but the society seems to have had fairly ample funds, since for some time as many as six thousand copies of the Herald were circulated.⁵⁴ Furthermore they brought Timothy Turner, an effective temperance lecturer, from New York, and at considerable expense secured A. W. Corey as editor of their paper.⁵⁵ The burden became too great, however; the Missouri Society was in 1839 induced to share the expenses of publication, and the title of the paper was altered to Missouri and Illinois Temperance Herald. The words and Washingtonian were added in 1842, after which time the paper did not long survive.

Ensley T. and C. Goudy began in January, 1837, to publish the first educational journal in Illinois, probably the first in the Mississippi valley. It was entitled Common School Advocate, and was issued monthly. Only a printer like Goudy, who ventured and failed in many journalistic undertakings, would have had the courage to use labor, ink, and paper, even, in publishing a school journal in Illinois, at that time. There was no common school system; there were no required qualifications for school teachers; and there was a latent antagonism on the part of a large portion of the populace to an educational system which would entail taxation.²⁴ "We apprehend," said S. S. Brooks, editor of the Jacksonville Gazette and News in a notice of the Common School Advocate, "there is not sufficient intelligence among the mass of teachers in the state to appreciate the merits of such a work, nor interest enough taken by parents in the success of common schools, or in the education of their children, to induce them to extend, at the present time, an adequate support to the enterprise." The editorial labor was done by "a few literary gentlemen who, from their deep interest in this subject, generously volunteered their services for one year without remuneration." Samuel Willard ascribed the editorship to Rev. Theron Baldwin.²⁵ But Brooks's pessimism seems to have been warranted, for the journal did not continue beyond the year. The failure of the Advocate was in keeping with the fate of all educational journals, four in number, which had been established up to that time in the United States. The first was begun in 1818; the least unsuccessful lived for ten years; others, four, two, and one, respectively. Considering the conditions, the Common School Advocate had its due length of life.

⁵⁴ Tanner, Martyrdom of Lovejoy, 100.

service. In the winter of 1851-1852 the Whigs of Chicago had a controlling interest in the Tribune. Scripps was a Free-Soiler, and something of a Democrat, so he sold his share in the Tribune, and with William Bross started the Democratic Press, through which he continued to act as a tonic to the press of the city. The Democratic Press was Free-Soil, but supported Douglas until the Kansas-Nebraska question drove it, in 1856, into the Republican party, and two years later, into the Tribune, which Charles H. Ray made, within this period, the best paper in Illinois, and which increased in prestige under Horace White and Joseph Medill, until it ranked high in American journalism.

Although the press was increasing in efficiency, especially through the establishment of such publications as the Tribune and the Prairie Farmer, and papers at Bloomington, Princeton, Peoria, Quincy, and Belleville, the general tone, especially of the political press, was still in the greater part violent and partisan. Amid the clatter of party discussions, however, there arose early in the period signs of reaction, of protest, of a demand for rational consideration of politics instead of party affairs. The demand was neither widespread nor loudly voiced, for the general public was far from desiring independent newspapers but individuals, and even communities, were moving in that direction. At Jacksonville, then the most cultured community in the State, the Illinoisian had, just before the close of the previous decade, shown better qualities than generally prevailed, but it had passed to the hands of William Hodge in the early forties, and had sunk to the common level. In its place there arose a short-lived but significant independent paper.

“At the suggestion of many friends,” Jonathan Baldwin paper for the sake of news. Under the head of "Crimes and Casualties" he printed:⁶⁹ "Our paper is small, and if our readers will for the present just have the goodness to imagine a certain due proportion of fires, tornadoes, murders, thefts, robberies and bully fights, from week to week, it will do just as well, for we can assure them they actually take place." Such a news service would have satisfied Thoreau, but did not content the subscribers. On the other hand, the editorial department was strong. The Quincy Whig commented facetiously on one of Mr. Turner's thirteen-column editorials, and was told in reply that the actual length was but eleven columns. These editorials dealt carefully and logically, but vigorously and sometimes caustically, with current political topics — slavery, the tariff, and banks — always considered morally or economically, without regard to parties. Agriculture and education were given much attention. The editor flatly refused to write "puffs" for advertisers. In the second number a great national newspaper at Washington was proposed, to represent both political parties, page and page alike. This was to be supplemented by similar papers at each state capital. "The constitution provides for catching runaway negroes, but it makes no provision for informing free white men," thus leaving the press and the people in the hands of demagogues and factions. The national bi-party paper was to "mitigate the ferocity of party zeal," and protect the public from low ribaldry, sophistry, and abuse.

Of course the Statesman did not "succeed," and it was discontinued at the end of one year; but it is significant, even in failure, as having thus early voiced a protest still heard, and as having striven for an ideal still but partly achieved.

⁶⁹ On July 17, 1843.

The free-soil movement in Illinois gave rise to a number of newspapers between 1842 and 1854. The movement may be said to have centered around the series of papers which included Genius of Universal Emancipation, Genius of Liberty, and Free West, and which were fairly entitled to be called the mouthpieces of the free-soil and abolition movement in the state. But by 1845 others had sprung up, and by 1848, when Van Buren was supported by an imposing list of able and important papers, including the Chicago Tribune, free-soil organs were fairly numerous.⁷⁰

On the breaking up of the Whig party a number of newspapers, like many individuals, found difficulty in placing themselves. The Whigs, like the Democrats in Illinois, were divided in two factions. Many Whigs felt that if they were to remain true to their principles, they could not cordially unite with any party then in existence;⁷¹ and many felt that no genuine Whig could join a party founded on the ⁷⁰ Liberty and Free-Soil papers in Illinois are enumerated as follows by Mr. T. C. Smith in his "Liberty and Free-Soil Parties in the Northwest" (Appendix B, p. 320):

1838-39	Lowell, Genius of Universal Emancipation	B. Lundy
1840-42	Lowell, Genius of Liberty	Z. Eastman
1842-54	Chicago, Western Citizen (with a daily edition, the Daily News , 1845; and another, the Daily Times , 1852).	Z. Eastman
1848	Chicago, Tribune	T. Stewart
1848	Waukegan, Lake County Chronicle	A. B. Tobey
1848-50	Rockford, Free Press	H. W. DePuy
1849	Waukegan, Free Democrat	N. W. Fuller
1850-54	Sparta, Freeman (later, Journal)	I. S. Coulter
1853-54	Galesburg, Western Freeman	W. J. Lane

Other names are those of the Alton Monitor, Geneva Western Mercury, Princeton Bureau Advocate, Quincy Tribune, and Peru Telegraph, all in 1848. There was one German paper, the Chicago Staats-Zeitung, 1848, and one Norwegian Frihets Banneret, 1852. There were probably many other ephemeral Free-Soil sheets in 1848; but their activity was so brief that they sank at once into oblivion, along with the pledges of the Illinois "Barnburners."

To Smith's list may be added the Belleville Freiheitsbote für Illinois, 1840; Alton Truth-Seeker, 1845-46; Elgin Western Christian, 1845; Little Fort Lake County Visiter, 1847; Greenville Barnburner, 1849; Galesburg Free Democrat, 1854; and Waukegan Freeman's Advocate, 1854-55.

slavery question.⁷² Because of the unusual lack of homogeneity in the state, coalition of free Whigs and free Democrats was considerably retarded.

In spite of the popular revolt against Douglas and his bill, neither the free Democrats nor the free Whigs soon seized the opportunity to lead in forming a coalition party, and the free Democrats finally played comparatively little part in the Republican movement in Illinois.⁷³ When the Nebraska bill was passed the Democratic Chicago Courant declared: "The political landmarks can no longer be Whig or Democratic, Free-Soil or Abolitionist, but must be merged into the two great parties, South and North."

In certain localities the free Democrats indicated readiness to form a new party, and a call was issued for a convention in Springfield on October 4 and 5. The meeting proved fruitless, however, and "in this campaign, therefore, the Illinois Free Democrats lost their identity as a party,"⁷⁴ as well as their opportunity to assume leadership in forming a new one.

The Illinois Whigs were extremely conservative. While the formation of state Republican organizations in Michigan, Wisconsin, and elsewhere was going on in 1854, the Illinois State Journal advised against abandoning the Whig organization, and its advice was followed.⁷⁵ Hence Illinois had no Republican organization in 1854, although the demand for one was voiced by local conventions at Princeton and elsewhere which declared in favor of organizing. Two years later, in the absence of any party machinery, a number of anti-Nebraska editors of the state held a preliminary convention at Decatur on February 22, 1856.

Early in January there had appeared in the Morgan Journal of Jacksonville, edited by Paul Selby, a suggestion for the holding of such a convention to agree on a policy for the approaching campaign. John Moses printed in the Chronicle of Winchester the first endorsement of the idea; the Illinois State Chronicle of Decatur followed, and suggested Decatur as the meeting place. After some further ratification a formal call was issued, bearing the endorsements of twenty-five papers:

As a result of this call a dozen persons were present at the opening meeting, including Dr. Charles H. Ray, Chicago Tribune; George Schneider, Chicago Staats Zeitung; V. Y. was made chairman and W. J. Usrey, secretary. The only outsider admitted to the deliberations of the convention was Abraham Lincoln, who was in conference nearly all day with the committee on resolutions, made up of Messrs. Ray, Schneider, Ralston, Wharton, Daugherty, and Pickett. This committee drafted a platform and appointed a state central committee, on the call of which the first Republican state convention in Illinois was held at Bloomington, May 29, 1856.⁷⁸

The great series of debates between Lincoln and Douglas, and the other political movements centering in these two men and leading to the nomination of Lincoln at Chicago, make the Illinois newspapers between 1856 and 1860 important sources of the history of a most critical national era. Through the newspapers have been preserved most of the speeches made by Lincoln all over the state in those years; yet the instances are many in which the papers reported in detail the reception of Lincoln, the procession to the fairgrounds, the menu of the picnic dinner, and recounted the incident in which Lincoln insisted on yielding his seat of honor to some humble admirer, but gave no word of his address except to mention for how many minutes or hours he spoke. This is true even of some of that large class made up of first papers to suggest Abraham Lincoln for the presidency.

Nothing short of a history of political parties in Illinois would serve to present the situation in the state between 1854 and the war. Nor is it possible to set forth in detail the way in which the newspapers reflected the shaping of political affairs. In general it may be said, however, that in Illinois Whig papers became Republican, and Democratic papers, less generally, remained Democratic.⁷⁷ In the border states many Whig papers became Democratic, including the St. Louis Republican, which circulated largely in southern Illinois, and the Louisville, Kentucky, Journal. There were some such changes in Illinois. The Jacksonville Sentinel changed from Whig to Democratic in 1856; the Knoxville Journal and Clinton Courier, formerly Independent, became Democratic in 1855, the Decatur Gazette made the same change in 1856, the Pana Herald in 1858; and the Pekin Tazewell Register, which had been Republican, altered to Democratic in the same year, as did the Peoria Transcript in 1859. On the other hand, the breach in the Democratic ranks, especially in the northern part of the state, was more marked. The Galena Jeffersonian, then under the editorship of Dr. Charles H. Ray, afterwards editor of the Chicago Tribune, took strong ground against the Kansas-Nebraska bill, though it afterward drifted back into the ranks of the Douglas Democracy. But many staunch Democratic papers revolted at that measure. Even the Southern Illinoisan, of Shawneetown, left Douglas on that point, and became Republican. Likewise the Aurora Guardian, Belvidere Standard, Peoria Banner, Canton Register, Belleville Advocate, and the influential German paper, Belleville Zeitung, altered their affiliations between 1856 and 1858 from Democratic, either to Free-Soil and then to Republican, or directly to Republican.

These are but isolated instances of changes either way. A large number of hitherto independent papers were drawn to one side or the other. Apparently in this the Republican forces had the advantage. In the starting of new papers, on the contrary, and perhaps partly as a result of defections from the ranks of Democratic papers, the Democrats outnumbered the Republicans, in 1857, 1858, and 1859, at a ratio of about two to one. A large number of these papers were brief campaign affairs, however, and they did not materially change the ratio as far as permanent papers were concerned.

FROM 1861 TO 1870

The Civil War greatly affected the newspapers and the newspaper situation, and set in motion certain developments that were not fully worked out until after the close of the period with which this paper deals. The stress and conflict of public opinion, and popular anxiety for news from the armies and from Washington not only revolutionized the practice of reporting and revised the form and makeup of papers; it made dailies out of weeklies, and overcame pious scruples against Sunday editions.⁷⁸

The immediate effect was on circulation. The papers of the larger towns and especially of Chicago were affected very advantageously. The circulation of the Tribune rose from 18,000 in 1861 to 40,000 in 1864, and other papers showed like increases. John Wentworth, who, in a panic at the prospect of war, sold his Democrat lest he should be ruined, saw that journal help to swell the increasing tide of subscriptions to a height hardly thought of before. The war put the Chicago newspapers for the first time on a really money-making basis. Those outside of Chicago, located in the larger towns and sufficiently well established to take advantage of the desire for immediate news in detail, were also given a fresh impetus.

There were few dailies in the state outside of Chicago, and none of them could compete with those of that city and St. Louis in furnishing news from the front and from Washington. "We had no daily here till 1866," writes a citizen⁷⁹ of Jacksonville, "so our people got the State Journal or Register for breakfast, the St. Louis papers for dinner, at one time, and the Chicago papers for supper." The Chicago and St. Louis papers gained at that time a circulation all over the state which they have never lost. Yet the larger dailies throughout the state held their own, and received their share of prosperity.

Smaller papers, or papers in the smaller towns not able to get telegraphic news, or not favorably situated for receiving news promptly from other sources, suffered both from the competition of papers of the larger towns and from the great rise in the price of paper, which came as a direct result of war.

The numerical status of newspapers in the state was seriously affected. The two causes just mentioned, and others, operated to decrease the number of papers, and as a result, we find a situation of unexampled prosperity on the one hand, and of poverty, decline, and extinction on the other. Beginning with 1861 there was a sharp decline in gather up and return to the service a number of deserters from the 109th Illinois who had returned to their homes. His work was seriously impeded by the radical utterances of the Gazette, which, like a majority of its constituents, was bitterly against the war. Consequently he closed the office during the six weeks of his stay. Colonel Newbold so conducted himself, however, as to make many warm friends, and helped materially to change local sentiment toward the Government. As a resident of Jonesboro, still living, has written, "the episode turned out very well."

The Loyalist, an extreme advocate of abolitionism, was established by George Brewster at Mason, Effingham County, in April, 1863. His radical utterances caused bitter feeling, and in nine months resulted in his being forced to leave. He was allowed to remove his establishment. The Picket Guard of Chester suffered more severely on the other side. John R. Shannon, the editor, found fault vituperatively with the measures adopted to suppress the rebellion. He became so extremely abusive that a body of soldiers broke into the office in July, 1864, and threw the type into the streets. The press was not seriously injured, and the office was refitted.⁸³ At Olney the Democratic press was broken up by a mob of soldiers and its publication was discontinued. A similar explosion of wrath at Maroa hung fire until 1867. There one T. J. Sharp began a Democratic Times, in January. His published expressions of discontent with the results of the war brought him into collision with various citizens, by whom he was badly beaten on November 27 and ordered to leave town. He did so, leaving also his printing equipment.⁸⁴ Other papers than these mentioned escaped similar treatment by temporary suspensions or by change of editors or policies.

Several instances of threatened violence to editors or their establishments which occurred previous to this time are mentioned here for want of a better place. The earliest, probably, was that in Vandalia in February, 1823, which has already been discussed.⁸⁵ The Illinois Republican at Springfield, an energetic Democratic paper to which Stephen A. Douglas as a young man was a contributor, was, in 1837, twice attacked by a mob, of which the sheriff of the county was a member. The mob was prevented from doing destruction only by the vigorous defense offered by the Webers, owners of the property.⁸⁶ In June, 1841, Ogle County "regulators" shot to death John and William Driscoll, two notorious horsethieves and outlaws. Philander Knappen, editor of the Rockford Star, denounced the execution editorially and printed a communication of similar import. Soon afterward three citizens, with the approval of public opinion, made pi of all type in the office. Knappen abandoned journalism in Rockford.

⁸⁶ A bit of the reminiscences of an old settler, published in 1871 and quoted in History of Sangamon County, Illinois (1881), pp. 225-224:

In 1837 Dr. Henry was one of the commissioners superintending the construction of the new State House in Springfield and a frequent contributor to the Sangamo Journal. Stephen A. Douglas was at the same time writing for the Illinois Republican and in several anonymous articles he attacked Dr. Henry and his official work. A committee of friends of Henry called upon the editor of the Journal to demand the name of the author, but the editor dispersed them with a vigorous use of his fists. Douglas, who witnessed the affair, wrote a highly colored account which the paper published. As a result the office was attacked by a mob, led by the sheriff, on two successive days, June 27 and 28, 1837, but the proprietors, with Douglas and other friends, beat them off. The sheriff was stabbed in the fray on the second day, fainted, and was carried home. That ended the riots. "These things gave notoriety to the paper."

stress of public opinion, was a part of the lawlessness that resulted in the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. In 1844 the despotism of Joseph Smith, leader of the Mormons in Hancock County, with Nauvoo as their holy city, became unbearable to a considerable number of his followers, who revolted. In order to publish the causes of their revolt and to disclose the iniquities of Smith and his Danite band and other new ecclesiastical inventions, these men established a newspaper, the Nauvoo Expositor. The first and only issue appeared Friday, June 7, 1844. It was published by William Law, Wilson Law, Charles Ivins, Francis M. Higbee, Chauncey L. Higbee, Robert D. Foster, and Charles A. Foster, with Sylvester Emmons as editor, and contains the preamble, resolutions, and affidavits of the seceders from the church at Nauvoo. On June 10 the city council declared the Expositor a nuisance and directed the mayor to have the establishment removed, which he did.⁸⁷ For this destructive act Joseph Smith and sixteen others were, after a week's delay, arrested on a charge of riot. "After a long and close examination they were all discharged."⁸⁸ In the meantime the dissenting publishers of the Expositor, apparently not awaiting the pretty farce by which Smith's mayor and magistrate gave a resemblance of legal consider-

⁸⁷ The order of removal was worded thus:

You are hereby commanded to destroy the printing press from whence issues the Nauvoo Expositor and pi the type of said printing establishment in the street, and burn all the Expositors and libelous handbills found in said establishment, and if resistance be offered to your execution of this order, by the owners or others, demolish the house, and if any one threatens you, or the mayor, or the officers of the city, arrest those who threaten you, and fail not to execute this order without delay, and make due return hereon.

By order of the City Council,
Joseph Smith, Mayor.

In a proclamation printed in the same issue of the Neighbor, Smith deemed the paper filthy and pestilential, and its publishers a set of unprincipled scoundrels, blacklegs, counterfeiters, debauchees, and villainous demagogues.

ation and approval to the acts destroying the paper, had taken themselves safely away. Smith's paper records their flight by noting that the persons concerned in the Expositor have all left Nauvoo, and that the guilty fleeth when no man pursueth.⁸⁹

The war played an important part not only in the changes that came in the character, number, and circulation of papers; it was more or less directly the cause of three important items in the development of the machinery of news-gathering and newspaper making. These were the inventions of the patent inside, the organization of the business that became the Western News Company, and the formation of the Western Associated Press.

In July, 1861, A. N. Kellogg, publisher of the Baraboo, Wisconsin, Republic, finding that in consequence of the enlistment of his patriotic journeymen he would be unable to issue a full sheet on the regular day, ordered of the Daily Journal office at Madison a number of half-sheet supplements printed on both sides with war news to fold with his own half-sheets. While mailing his edition it occurred to him that if the awkward fact of his paper's being in two pieces could be obviated an excellent paper could be regularly issued with a decided saving of labor and expense. As a consequence, he issued, on July 12, 1861, the first sheet with "patent inside." The idea was at once taken up by the Madison Journal, then by the Milwaukee Wisconsin, and in August, 1865, by Mr. Kellogg himself in Chicago. G. F. Kimball of the Belleuille Advocate began to print insides in 1866.⁹⁰ By 1880 twenty-one establishments were supplying 3,238 papers, most of them in the western states. Although the idea originated in Wisconsin and has been developed in all parts of the country, Kellogg and Chicago have remained the center of the industry, which has grown to enormous size.

As Chicago was the center of the patent inside industry, it was natural that Illinois newspapers should make more general use of the idea than those of other states. The effect was not marked in the first few years, but by the later seventies nearly one-half of the smaller country weeklies were "co-operative," to use the word by which such papers were designated in the newspaper directories. Many of them, no doubt, would not have been established had not this invention greatly reduced the cost of production.

The Western News Company grew out of the system organized by a young and energetic Chicago newsdealer, John R. Walsh, to build up a business on the increased demand for prompt delivery of newspapers and periodicals due to the war excitement. The system that now distributes nearly all of the copies of the larger papers in the country was begun by James Gordon Bennett, with the New York Herald, in 1835. Out of his idea grew the American News Company and rivals, most of which were absorbed. Until 1861 the business of distributing not only New York, but Chicago papers was carried on by that company with headquarters in New York City. In that year, however, Walsh opened a news depot in Chicago to capture the business of the middle west, and commenced to supply the outlying towns of Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa. Newsdealers in those states soon found that they could get their newspapers from Walsh twelve hours earlier than from the American News Company, and twenty-four hours earlier than by mail.⁹¹ Walsh soon had all of the business, and kept it throughout the war. By this time he was distributing fully one-half of the total issue of the Tribune and the Times.⁹² This competition led to negotiations which resulted, in 1866, in the absorption of his business by the older company, of which it became the first branch, with Walsh as manager.

The war had brought prosperity to the Chicago papers, and had shown very clearly the need, in that news center, of a press association which would do for the Chicago and other middle western papers what the American News Association was doing for those of New York. On the initiative largely of Joseph Medill, of the Chicago Tribune, a meeting was held at Louisville, Kentucky, on November 22 and 23, 1865, at which the Western Associated Press was formed. Horace White, managing editor of the Tribune, was made a member of the executive committee.

The forming of this association not only meant co-operative use of telegraph news among the papers that held membership, but, also through co-operation with the New York Association, it greatly broadened, at a minimum cost, the news resources of both the western and the eastern papers. Without such associations the telegraph would never have been able to keep pace with the demands of the press, and the telegraphic news service of anything like the scope attained even by 1870 would have been possible only for the largest and wealthiest papers. The effect of this organization and its successor, the Associated Press, upon the number of papers fully equipped with news service, particularly the daily papers, of course, is not to be overlooked. One direct result was to make a close corporation of the newspapers already existing in any particular place, and to render it almost impossible to start a new newspaper that could compete with them, inasmuch as the newspaper could not get the Associated Press dispatches without their consent.⁹³

Immediately following the close of the war there was a serious decline in newspaper prosperity. The number of papers started year by year at this time increases, but the figures do not signify healthy growth. The Chicago papers declined in circulation to a point not much beyond that of 1861, and never fully regained their circulation until after the fire. The papers of the larger towns, owing to improved telegraphic service, the rapid growth of the towns, and other causes, did not suffer severely. The country press, on the whole, however, began then a decline in quality that has continued to a large extent to the present time. That decline is not quantitative; it does not include many of the daily papers, nor by any means all of the country weeklies in the state. But the increasing encroachment of the dailies of Chicago and the other larger cities of the state have taken away much of the prosperity and the influence of a large proportion of the country press, the quality of which has consequently declined.

In spite of the various causes that operated against the newspapers between 1860 and 1870, however, there was a remarkable increase in their number. The census returns for 1860 show a total, of all classes, of 286, of which twenty-three were dailies, six tri-weeklies, two semi-weeklies, 238 weeklies, and seventeen monthlies.⁹⁴ By 1870 these figures had grown to thirty-nine dailies, ten tri-weeklies, four semi-weeklies, 364 weeklies, eleven semi-monthlies, seventy-two monthlies, and three quarterlies — a total of 505, a remarkable increase over the 286 in 1860. Perhaps the most noticeable features of this comparison are the slight increase in dailies and the great increase in monthlies. The actual numerical increase in dailies between 1850 and 1860 was less by only one paper than that between 1860 and 1870. The additional monthly publications, largely in Chicago, were one of the indications of the growing importance of that city as a publishing center.

FROM 1871 TO 1879

The very bulk of the issue of the newspaper and periodical press in the last decade to be considered makes impossible here a treatment much more than merely statistical. This was a time of great numerical increase; it comprehends the great Chicago fire of October, 1871; the dismal year of 1876, perhaps the worst in the whole history of Illinois newspapers; the rise of the daily to great importance; and the growth of the Chicago press into truly "metropolitan" proportions.

The whole list for 1870 was 505.⁹⁵ The following decade more than doubled that, showing in 1880 a total of 1,017, divided into seventy-four dailies, six tri-weeklies, seventeen semi-weeklies, 758 weeklies, eighteen semi-monthlies, 118 monthlies, and twenty-two quarterlies. The number of papers in the state each year of this decade is shown by Rowell's newspaper directory to have been as follows:⁹⁶ 1870, 422; 1871, 499; 1872, 518; 1873, 544; 1874, 588; 1875, 642; 1876, 707; 1877, 709; 1878, 716; 1879, 732; 1880, 832. It will be noticed that 1877 had but two more papers than 1876. In the United States as a whole there were one hundred and seventy-one fewer newspapers at the beginning of 1877 than there were one year earlier. "It is apparent," wrote Rowell's editor in 1877, "that the last twelve months have, in a financial sense, been unusually unsatisfactory to newspaper publishers. Partly by reason of the excitements and hopes incidental to a national election of an unaccustomed order, a sufficient number of newspapers have come into being to have maintained the total number reported in 1876, had there not been, in addition to the eventual suspension of many of the newspapers, also an unusual mortality among those already established. Journalistic prosperity, however, is not to be judged by the number of papers that are established within a given period, but by the number that maintain their existence; and the centennial year has undeniably been one of extended pecuniary oppression among the men that publish papers." This "pecuniary oppression" seems to have dwelt most heavily on the dailies, which were reduced in number from fifty in 1876 to forty-seven in 1877.

⁹⁵ The totals include a few semi-annual and annual publications of which no note is taken in the analysis.

The Chicago publishing equipment was almost totally destroyed by the fire of October 9-12, 1871, in which every newspaper establishment was burned out. Yet the larger daily papers all appeared, in small sheets, within forty-eight hours. The Journal issued an extra, a small three-column sheet printed on one side, on October 9; the issue of October 10, printed at a small job office that had been spared by the flames, announced that the Evening Post would be issued that day, and that the Tribune would be issued on the next, October 11. The Inter-Ocean got out a number on October 10; the Republican and the Mail appeared on the 12th. No important daily paper suspended publication permanently on account of the fire, but a number of weekly and monthly periodicals were never revived. Others, especially several that had New York offices, were moved to that city. As an early consequence of the fire, therefore, the number of publications in the city was considerably reduced. But those that remained partook of the great revival of the city as a whole; out of the ashes grew the great and real prosperity of the Chicago dailies, and of the Chicago press in general.

The increase in the daily press in this decade is important numerically. The totals for each year are:

The slow growth of daily newspapers until toward the end of the period contrasts sharply with their rapid increase later. In fact, the close of the decade marks the real beginning of their most rapid growth in the state at large. This growth is naturally affected directly by the increase of population in the towns. The minimum population on which a daily can be supported was once set by Horace Greeley at about ten thousand, but at the time he gave that testimony there were papers in this country supported by communities of less than half that size. Since that time the number has considerably decreased, so far as the town of publication is concerned; but taken in connection with the rural population upon which the small dailies have come more and more to depend, the decrease has been slight. At present, indeed, it is apparently increasing, rather than diminishing. The relation of population to daily papers in Illinois in 1880 was shown by the census report as follows:

The daily papers of the state have shown a tendency steadily toward afternoon rather than morning issues. That tendency first took definite form in this decade between 1871 and 1880. At the beginning of it, the numbers of morning and afternoon issues in the state were almost equal. Of the forty-two downstate dailies in 1878, thirteen were morning and twenty-nine were evening. In Chicago, eight were morning and four were evening. The tendency in the smaller cities has continued toward evening papers.⁹⁹ This is doubtless due to the growth and the improved distributing facilities of the Chicago and St. Louis morning papers, and to the cheap "pony" news service offered by the Scripps-McRae, and, later, the United Press Associations, as well as others that have been organized since 1900. On the other hand, since 1900 there has been an increase in the number and importance of downstate morning dailies. This increase has come from cities which have become large enough to support papers holding Associated Press franchises. These papers are, as afternoon papers are not, able to compete with the Chicago papers, and will doubtless be an increasingly important feature of Illinois journalism as the number of larger cities in the state is augmented. At the same time the situation is complicated by the help being rendered the afternoon papers by more efficient telegraphic news service, and by the greatly increasing importance of the telephone as an ally of the afternoon press.

The lower price that came with the general introduction of wood-pulp in the manufacture of paper, and the increased activity in the patent-inside industry helped upward the figures of both daily and weekly papers. The decline in the quality of many of the country weeklies, mentioned in the next preceding section, was remarkable in this last decade. This came with the more general use of the patent inside, which convenience was, by the later seventies, used by nearly one-half of the weeklies in the smaller towns.

The patent inside was chiefly used by papers newly starting in business; but it has no doubt prolonged the life of many a paper that would otherwise have suffered extinction, perhaps not in all cases undeserved. There was something to be said in favor of the patent inside; more, of course, before the development of the stereotyped plate matter which has almost entirely superseded the earlier scheme of economy, than later. It supplied material often of a respectable quality which would otherwise have been out of reach of the country editor. Matter of special interest and often of value to the country population was thus furnished; good fiction and less good was disseminated. But granting the patent inside full credit of economy, convenience, and respectability, it nevertheless lowered the quality of the country weekly. Up to the time of the Civil War, however violent or crude the tone in many instances, the country press had individuality of character, and in its own community was as real and definite a force as the great papers of the era of personal journalism were in larger spheres. More than half of the influence of the paper was dissipated when half of its pages were filled and printed by "outsiders." It does not seem that this should necessarily have been true, for the editor still had two pages at his command; but it was true, nevertheless. Many papers, indeed, kept aloof from the patent inside, retained their individuality — and their advertising space — and have steadily improved, as the press as a whole has improved; others have grown into dailies; still others, after more or less brief careers as "co-operatives," have recovered their individuality, and become again "all home print." But it must be recorded that in the years just following the war there began in Illinois that class of papers which, unlike many that preceded the war or survived it, are of mere numerical importance in the story of the Illinois press. That class grew and flourished most numerous in this period between 1870 and 1880.

The numerical increase was fostered also by a usage developed in this decade by which papers for small towns in surrounding territory were printed at a central office. A typical instance is that of the Joliet Phoenix, which was the home office of a brood of Phoenixes bearing date-lines of Lockport, Wilmington, Lemont, Braidwood, Peotone, and Plainfield. Such papers have at least three pages in common. A local editor supplies some news from each town, which, with the name, is all of the one paper that differs from all the others.

Another mechanical aid to the development of the newspaper industry which was contributed by Illinois in this period, was the folder, which made the web perfecting press a possibility. The invention was made by Walter Scott, who was at that time foreman of the machinery department of the Chicago Inter-Ocean. The Bullock presses of the establishment were promptly equipped with the new invention, and thus the Inter-Ocean was the first paper to be printed on a perfecting press.¹⁰⁰

The political aspect of the period will have to be passed entirely, except for a word concerning the Granger movement and the Greenback party, which stirred the press, usually the rural press, of the country in the late seventies and early eighties.

Perhaps a score of Illinois papers supported Greeley in 1872, including such influential ones as the Chicago Tribune and Belleville Zeitung. Of these a considerable number then became identified with the Granger movement; within 1873 and 1874 several new Granger and anti-monopolist papers were started, but most of the supporters of these causes were recruits from the old parties. Such papers were to be found at Macomb, Bloomington, Salem, Oregon, Decatur, Hillsboro, Woodstock, and elsewhere. Usually the Granger papers lasted but two years, some not so long, a few considerably longer. At least half of them had become Greenback before 1876, and, with others, brought to the support of Peter Cooper at least thirty papers in the state. Some of these had rather fantastic idiosyncrasies. The Unicorn Greenback at Barry was written almost entirely in verse; the Greenback Gazette at Chester was printed on green paper. There was a lull in Greenback journalism between 1876 and 1878, but in the latter year and 1879 sixteen new papers, and as many other recruits, together with those that had survived from before the earlier campaign, gave Weaver the support of forty papers in Illinois, including such as the Pontiac Free Trader, Morgan Monitor of Jacksonville, Golden Era of McLeansboro, and New Era of Woodstock which were not originally Greenback. A considerable number were established to support that party, among which were Unicorn Greenback, Barry; Express and Sentinel, Chicago; National Era, Danville; Independent, Erie; Independent, Grafton; Local Leader, Lexington; Herald, Milford; Beacon, Milton; Reformer, Morris; Industrial Tribune, Murphysboro; Legal Tender, Pekin; Observer, Petersburg; Greenback Post, Quincy; National Greenbacker and Telephone, Rochelle; Review, Roodhouse; Herald, Shelbyville; Industrial Banner, Yates City. The Greenback party thus brought into existence a number of papers, nearly all short lived, and helped out of existence certain others which became advocates of the fiat money idea.

One more discharge of statistics, and the array of figures on the press in Illinois at the close of the sixty-five years with which this sketch has to do, will have been shown. The thousand and seventeen papers in the state left few vicinities unprovided with "the source of American culture." No county was without its paper. Twenty-eight towns had five or more; twelve had four, thirty-seven had three, ninety-three had two, and one hundred and seventy municipalities were supplied each with one newspaper.

There were publications in six languages at that time, though previously eight tongues had been represented. The Bohemians had four, one of which was a daily; nine hundred and twenty, including sixty-three dailies, were printed in English; one was printed in French and two in Polish; there were nine dailies and sixty-one other papers in German, and one daily and nineteen others in the Scandinavian languages. In Chicago alone there were two hundred and eighty-nine newspapers and periodicals, comprised of eighteen dailies, one hundred and thirty-eight weeklies, ninety-one monthlies, and forty-two of other periods of publication. On another basis of classification, these included sixty-three devoted to news and politics, eight to agriculture, fifty-one to commerce and trade, one to finance, nine to literature,¹⁰¹ thirty-three to religious purposes, and one hundred and twenty-four to a wide variety of interests, from oriental archæology to trap shooting.

¹⁰¹A total of 120 "periodicals with some sort of literary interest dominant in their pages" were attempted in Chicago prior to 1880: twenty-seven in the forties, and fifties, forty-six from 1860 to 1871 inclusive, and forty-seven in the seventies after the fire. Of the whole number, forty continued for less than one year, and twenty-two for one year only. Fewer than half, therefore, outlasted a year. Herbert E. Fleming, Literary Interests of Chicago, 112.

Of religious publications, four were Baptist, one Congregational, two Disciples, two Episcopal, one Jewish, three Lutheran, five Methodist, one Mormon, two Presbyterian, one Reformed, six Roman Catholic, one Adventist, one Spiritualist, one Swedenborgian, one United Brethren, one Unitarian, one Universalist, and fifteen non-sectarian.

A retrospective glance over the threescore and five years between 1814, when the first little three-column paper was started at Kaskaskia, and 1879, reveals but a few more than a thousand papers still extant out of a total of about three thousand that have furnished forth their salutarities and their advertising rates. But a third of all those hopefully begun have endured the "halcyon and vociferous". The newspaper press spread northward over the state like a prairie fire; like a fire it has often flared and smoked, and gone out; and one turns from the record of two thousand failures with a feeling as of stepping among a residue of scorched bones.

Yet the successes have been more important than the failures have been numerous, and these papers, living and dead, have played an active part in the life and growth of the commonwealth. Long before the close of this period there had grown up a number of strong and energetic journals, some in every section of the state, upon which the journalistic honor of the commonwealth rests secure. A sketch as brief as this is left incomplete because it is without a more detailed account of the part these papers have played in the growth of the state; and especially without some more adequate reference to the men who have made these papers, and whose lives are the best part of the history of the Illinois press. A number of papers in the state have long since passed the half-century mark; men are still active in journalism who began their labors before the Civil War, and one has died while this work was in preparation whose connection with Illinois newspapers began in 1848.

Incomplete as it is, however, perhaps this survey may serve to give some order and significance to the kaleidoscopic record which follows in the bibliography.

These letters, following the description of a paper, indicate that copies or files may be found in the corresponding libraries, the contents of which are listed in this volume. The name of a town following such description indicates that copies or files are to be found in the public library of that town.

The papers of each town are arranged in the order in which they were established, except that all papers in any series are grouped. For instance note under Albion, page 2, that Journal precedes Bumble-Bee, though established later. Under Chicago, papers established in each year are arranged alphabetically, subject to the same exception.

+1840 means that the paper was a continuation from a preceding name or location.

1840+ means that the paper was continued under another name or in another place.

1860 to date (1875) means that the paper was still in existence at the last report, in 1875, but that no later information has been obtained.

Unless otherwise noted, papers were issued weekly.

The words Ayer, Rowell, Coggeshall, refer to newspaper directories issued by those men; Gerhard, to Illinois As it Is.

Names of towns as parts of titles are omitted except when needed for clearness.

ALTON, MADISON COUNTY

SPECTATOR, 1832-1839: Published first in Upper Alton by O. M. Adams and Edward Breath. The firm soon dissolved, and Mr. Breath alone removed this paper to Lower Alton (now Alton) in October, 1832. Mr. J. T. Hudson, successor to Mr. Breath, edited and published it, 1834-1836; W. A. Beaty, 1836; D. Ward, 1836-1837; Wm. Hessin, 1837; Mr. Hessin and Seth T. Sawyer, 1837; Mr. Hessin, 1837-1838; J. Clark Virgin in December, 1838, and he soon suspended it. It was Whig in politics, giving much attention to the banking system of the country. ESHM

AMERICAN, November 22, 1833-1834: Founded by J. S. Buchanan; devoted to the agricultural, mechanical, and mercantile interests of Lower Alton and surrounding country; religious but not denominational. Published by Messrs. Bailey and Parks and edited by Rev. Thomas Lippincott. Monthly. H

WESTERN PIONEER AND BAPTIST STANDARD BEARER, + June 30, 1836-1839: Removed from Rock Spring in June, 1836, by Ashford Smith and Company, under patronage of the Baptist denomination in Illinois and Missouri. Its editors were J. M. Peck, at first alone, afterward associated with E. Rogers and Rev. Washington Leverett. With the beginning of its second year it was known as the Western Pioneer. It was finally discontinued as a separate publication about the close of 1838, and combined in January, 1839, with a paper published at Louisville, Ky., and New Albany, Iowa, entitled, in 1839, Baptist Banner and Western Pioneer. (See Rock Spring Pioneer). H

TELEGRAPH, January 20, 1836 to 1882: Founded by R. M. Treadway and L. A. Parks. Published by Messrs. Treadway, Parks, and S. G. Bailey, 1836-1837; Parks and Bailey, 1837; Mr. Parks, 1837; Mr. Parks and John Bailhache, 1837; Mr. Bailhache, 1837-1838. In 1838 S. R. Dolbee purchased a half interest and firm continued until 1850 when Dolbee was succeeded by Wm. H. Bailhache, son of John Bailhache. From 1852-1854, E. L. Baker was one of the firm. Mr. Baker and L. A. Parks conducted it, 1854-1855. In 1855 the Telegraph was merged in the Courier (which see) and so remained until the death of the Courier in 1861, when L. A. Parks and J. T. Beem and S. V. Crossman revived the publication of the Telegraph. Parks and Crossman continued its publication, 1861-1864; Mr. Parks and Thos. S. Pinckard, 1864-1866; Mr. Parks, 1866; Parks and Chas. Holden, 1866-1867; Parks, Holden, and W. T. Norton, 1867-1875; Holden and Norton, 1875-1880; Mr. Norton, 1880 to 1893. After 1888 the paper was published by the Alton Telegraph Printing Company. In 1893 W. T. Norton sold his stock to W. J. A. Cousley and W. H. Bauer, who with other stockholders continue to publish the paper, with W. J. A. Cousley as editor. Mr. John Bailhache was its editor, 1837-1841, and from 1841 for several years it was edited by Geo. T. M. Davis. It was known simply as the Telegraph until April 3, 1841, when it became the Alton Telegraph and Democratic Review. In 1853 it became the Alton Telegraph and Madison County Record, which name it retained until merged in the Courier. When the Whig party died it became a strong Republican organ. During the fall of 1836 great excitement spread over the country as a consequence of John Quincy Adams's contest in Congress over the right of petition. It is asserted that the Telegraph was the only paper west of Cincinnati which supported Mr. Adams in that struggle. January 1, 1851, a tri-weekly was begun; in 1852 the daily was begun; the weekly was continued.

THE JOURNALISTS.
The Journalists of the State are to be congratulated on their recent success in the election of a new body of officers. The result is a very creditable one, and shows that the public mind is becoming more and more enlightened on the subject of the press. The new body of officers is composed of men of high standing and ability, and it is to be hoped that they will be able to do credit to their office.

When Elijah P. Lovejoy became its editor he began and unrelentingly to assail the institution of slavery in columns. In 1836 he resolved to remove the press and of the Observer to Alton, Illinois. Before shipment much of material was destroyed and cast into the Mississippi, and the rest met the same fate when it was unloaded on the wharf at Alton. Notwithstanding these calamities, Mr. Lovejoy procured a new press and the first issue of the Alton Observer appeared, September 8, 1836. This new press, type, and material was destroyed by a mob on the night of August 21, 1837. The third press was ordered, and destroyed on the night of its arrival, and the fragments were cast into the river. A fourth press was ordered at once. It was shipped from Champaign and arrived in Alton on the night of November 6, 1837. On the night of November 7 Mr. Lovejoy was killed, his press broken up and its fragments cast into the river. The first number of Alton December 18, 1837, the paper was published in Chicago by Elisha W. Chester and sent to Alton for distribution. Rev. T.
B. Hulbert supplied local news from Alton. This arrangement was abandoned April 19, 1838. BS

ILLINOIS TEMPERANCE HERALD, June 1, 1839—1840+ : Monthly.
Edited by F. W. Graves, and later by A. W. Corey, assisted by

'find' for $35, and removed it to Iowa. From 1858 to 1870 it was used to print the Cresco Plain Dealer, at New Oregon, Howard County, Iowa. Then George E. Frost bought it for $200 and printed the Clear Lake Observer on it till about 1876, when it was again sold to P. A. Gates, editor of the Belmont Herald. For about twenty years it remained in service at Belmont, Iowa, and was then sold to Mr. C. P. Gunther, of Chicago, who exhibited it in 'Libby Prison'—Gender

TAPER, June, 1840-—(?) : A non-sectarian religious monthly, edited by Rev. Thomas Lippincott, a Presbyterian minister. 5

OBSERVER, September 8, 1836-August 21, 1837 + : This paper was first published in St. Louis as an organ of the Presbyterians. When Elijah P. Lovejoy became its editor he began vigorously and unrelentingly to assail the institution of slavery through its columns. In 1836 he resolved to remove the press and material of the Observer to Alton, Illinois. Before shipment much of the material was destroyed and cast into the Mississippi, and the rest met the same fate when it was unloaded on the wharf at Alton. Notwithstanding these reverses, Mr. Lovejoy procured a new press and the first issue of the Alton Observer appeared, September 8, 1836. Elisha W. Hulbert, in the collection of the Chicago Historical Society.
B. Hulbert suggested that the press was abandoned April 1838.

ILLINOIS TEMPERANCE : Edited by F. W. Green, and published by Timothy Turner; published for the Illinois State Temperance Society. The title was changed to MISSOURI AND ILLINOIS TEMPERANCE : Edited by A. W. Corey, 1842; and was published as the organ of the Illinois State Temperance Society, 1842, the paper favored the cause of temperance societies, and the Missouri and Illinois Temperance Society. A. W. Corey was editor.

¹The battered press has been preserved in the collection of the "find" for $35, and removed to the collection of the Chicago Public Dealer, at New Orleans. E. Frost bought it for $500 and presented it to the Chicago Historical Society in 1876, when it was again sold to J. S. Foster, who sold it to Mr. C. F. Garrison, of Chicago, who sold it to the Chicago Negro Servants of America, 214, n.

- VOICE OF ILLINOIS, 1838 to close of campaign. Supported Cyrus Edwards for governor, Wm. H. Davidson for lieutenant governor, and George Churchill for senator. Campaign paper published by a Whig committee for Madison county.
- ALTONIAN, March 13-27, 1838: Edited and published by L. A. Parks and Edmund Breath. Favored Whig principles. Only three numbers issued. S
- COMMERCIAL GAZETTE, 1839-1840: Published by Samuel S. Brooks and John H. Pettit. It was suspended in March, 1840, and revived for the campaign, after which it was again suspended. It was Democratic in politics. A
- SUCKER, 1840: Published by Parks and Beaty, and edited by "Ourselves," who were understood to be Wm. S. and John Lincoln and James Hall. It was Whig and supported Harrison for the presidential nomination. It was merged in the Telegraph in March, 1840.
- PEOPLE'S MISCELLANY AND ILLINOIS HERALD, July 27, 1842—(?): Another paper edited by A. W. Corey, who in the first number announced the discontinuance of the Illinois Temperance Herald. The prospectus announced the paper to be the organ of the Illinois State Temperance society, and all other temperance societies that wished to use its columns; but unlike its unsuccessful predecessors, this was to be a general newspaper. Parks and Souther were its publishers. AF
- PRESBYTERY REPORTER, 1845-1860+: Edited by Rev. A. T. Norton. Only two numbers were issued the first year. Issued quarterly, 1847-1850; bi-monthly, 1850-1854; suspended; revived in 1855 and issued monthly. In 1860 it was taken to Chicago, but later, publication was resumed at Alton. Its subscription list was finally sold to Herald Presbyter, Cincinnati. S
- TRUTH SEEKER, November, 1845-September, 1846: Quarterly. Edited by the Rev. Lemuel Foster. The occasion of the paper was the suppression, by the Chicago Western Citizen, of the report of the discussion which took place in the annual meeting of the Illinois Anti-Slavery Society, held June, 1845, at Alton. After almost a year Truth Seeker abandoned the task of reforming Mr. Eastman et al., and left the Western Citizen still impenitent. H
- PROTESTANT MONITOR, 1846-1848: Removed from Greenville. E. M. Lathrop was editor; Lathrop and John M. McPike were publishers. Suspended with vol. 3, no. 32, May 24, 1848. Revived as Alton Monitor, 1848; edited by John W. Buffum. Suspended at close of campaign. It was Democratic, and a violent religious sheet. H

COURIER, May 29, 1852-1861: Published by Geo. T. Brown; associated with him were James Gamble and John Fitch (see Banner, Carrollton). It was edited by Mr. Fitch, 1853-1854. Mr. Brown was its sole editor and proprietor, 1854-1860, when he sold to B. J. F. Hanna and S. V. Crossman. In May, 1860, Benjamin Teasdale and B. F. Webster obtained an interest. Mr. Webster retired in December, 1860, and its publication was abandoned in January, 1861 (see Alton Telegraph). In the Kansas-Nebraska controversy it strongly favored free soil and in 1856 favored Frémont for president. In 1858 the Courier became Republican and supported Lincoln against Douglas. When they reached common political ground the Courier and Telegraph were merged. Daily, tri-weekly, and weekly.

Jennie D. Hayner, Lib. Assn. HUSF

VORWÄRTS, 1852-54: Published by P. Stibolt and V. Walter. Mr. Stibolt took it to Galena, and subsequently he went to Peoria, where he became the editor of the Deutsche Zeitung. It was Democratic. German.

After five numbers Randall sold his interest to Whiteley, who then engaged as editor T. Herbert Whipple, afterwards one of the editors of the New York World. After the retirement of Randall this paper was called PF

REPUBLICAN, +1857-1858: With the change in name the paper was re-reduced in size. February 12, 1858, Mr. Whipple became "corresponding editor," Mr. Whiteley assuming the general editorship. The last issue appeared November 5, 1858. P

TEMPERANCE MONITOR, March, 1858-1859: Started as a temperance organ by James P. Snell. It survived about a year. Mr. Snell entered the army at the beginning of the Civil War, and at its close became editor of the Mendota Bulletin. E

- REFORMER, July, 1858-1860: A sixteen-page monthly. Established by Augustus Harman and Ellen Beard. It was discontinued in June, 1860. It declared itself "to be what its name indicates," and fought ardently for prohibition, dress reform, etc. Miss Beard soon became Mrs. Harman. She assisted her husband in the editorial department, set type, canvassed for subscribers, and lectured.
- TEMPERANCE TOCSIN, April till fall, 1860: A sheet half the size of the Reformer, established by Augustus Harman and wife, intended for local circulation. Mr. Harman died in the fall of 1860, after which Mrs. Harman continued the publication of the Tocsin for a short time.
- CHRONICLE, February, 1861: Established by John H. Hodder, editor and proprietor. This paper existed about six months.
- HERALD, June, 1866-1903: Established by Thomas E. Hill. He was succeeded in the ownership of the paper by the firms of Hill and Gale; Gale and Shaw; Shaw and Bangs; Bangs, Owen and Ford; and Bangs and Owen. In 1871 the paper was purchased by Pierce Burton, who in 1874 sold a half interest to Mr. James Shaw, who re-sold to Mr. Burton in 1880. The latter continued the paper until he established the Aurora Daily Express in 1882, and thereafter the Herald was the weekly edition of that paper. Originally Republican in politics, under Mr. Burton it was Independent. In 1876 it supported Peter Cooper for President; and it advocated Greenback principles as long as the party of that name had a national organization. Mr. Burton retired from business in 1902. After several changes of ownership, the Express ceased publication in 1903, and with it perished also the Herald. PU
- WEEKLY, June, 1867: Established by Dudley Randall; had a brief existence.
- ARGUS, 1867: This paper was in some sort the successor of the Aurora Weekly. It was established by Dudley Randall, and edited by him and W. H. H. Brainard. Possibly there was simply a change of name without change in proprietorship or in the character of the paper.
- VOLKSFREUND, 1868 to date: Established by Peter Klein and Jacob Siegmund. In 1871 Mr. Klein purchased the interest of Mr. Siegmund, and has since continued sole proprietor. Republican until 1884, when it supported Cleveland for President. It soon became Republican again, and has remained so. May 27, 1895, a daily edition was started, and has been continued. U
- CITY LIFE ILLUSTRATED, 1871: Founded by Dudley Randall and continued several months. Life attained a large circulation for those days.

FREE METHODIST, 1872-1874+: A Free Methodist weekly, moved from New York City by Louis Bailey. Purchased in 1874 by D. P. Baker and T. B. Arnold, who moved it to Sycamore.

ARMY RECORD, 1873-1874: Monthly advertising sheet edited and published by James D. Fox. Apparently changed the next year to Army Register, and the date of establishment moved back one year.

VIDETTE, 1873-1874: Edited and published by Tounshendeau and Lindsey.

DAILY NEWS, February 22, 1874: Founded by Jacob Siegmund and Charles M. Faye. The first daily paper in Aurora to maintain a permanent existence. Mr. Faye sold his interest to Mr. Siegmund in September, 1875, and was succeeded for a few weeks by Orville B. Merrill. On February 1, 1876, Willis B. Hawkins became owner of one-half the plant. Hawkins remained with the News for several years. On his retiring, Mr. Siegmund published the paper for a time, with Richard W. Corbett as editor. In 1884 Mr. Siegmund sold the plant to Edward Northam and Eben F. Beaupré, who published the paper about two years, and then sold it to John F. Dewey. In 1891 Mr. Dewey sold to Walter S. Frazier. From Mr. Frazier ownership of the paper passed at his death to Lincoln B. Frazier, a son. Under the proprietorship of L. B. Frazier the News has continued. W. W. Clark is the present editor. PU

EVENING POST, 1878-1897: Daily; established by a printer named Welch. From Welch's hands it passed to those of Peter Klein and Louis A. Constantine, under the firm name of Klein and Constantine. This co-partnership was of less than six months' duration; then Peter Klein transferred his interest in the paper to his partner, who kept the Post going for nearly twenty years. In 1897 Constantine was appointed postmaster of Aurora, and soon after this the Evening Post was discontinued.

INDEPENDENT, September, 1878: Established by Edward Keough, formerly of the Elgin Times. The Independent was started as a Democratic paper; but the Democrats of Aurora apparently did not care for an organ, and the Independent lived but a short time.

AVA, JACKSON COUNTY

REGISTER, 1876- —(?) : Established by George Jahn and Bethune Dishon. Democratic. Mr. Dishon retired in 1877 leaving Mr. Jahn editor. In Rowell for 1879, Dishon is given as editor and publisher.

BEARDSTOWN, CASS COUNTY

BEARDSTOWN CHRONICLE AND ILLINOIS BOUNTY LAND ADVERTISER, June 18, 1833—34: Established by Francis Arenz "as one of several enterprises he engaged in for developing the new country and incidentally promoting his own business interests." Arenz was a Whig, but the paper was neutral, under the management of John B. Fulks. In the fall or winter of 1834 the plant was sold and moved to Rushville. S

GAZETTE, August 15, 1845—1852+: Established by Sylvester Emmons, who had precipitately removed from Nauvoo after issuing one number of an Anti-Mormon Expositor at that place. The paper was Whig, violently inimical to Democracy and Mormonism. Emmons sold in 1852 to C. D. Dickerson, who after less than eight months sold to J. L. Sherman, who changed the title to S

BEARDSTOWN AND PETERSBURG GAZETTE, December 9, 1852—1854+: Conducted by J. L. Sherman as a Whig organ until probably 1854, when he sold to B. C. Drake, who changed the name to S

- CENTRAL ILLINOISAN, +1854-1861: Conducted by B. C. Drake as a Whig paper until the organization of the Republican party, of which it at once became a supporter. In 1858, before the beginning of the Douglas and Lincoln joint debates, Drake began a daily, which he continued until the beginning of the Civil War, when he closed the office and enlisted. S
- DEMOCRAT, March 12, 1858-1865: The first Democratic paper in Beardstown; established by W. D. Shurtliff, and at first edited by Shurtliff and Davis. In 1862 J. K. Vandemark was made editor. He resigned in the fall; in 1863 Charles R. Fisk and wife bought the paper and continued it until the close of the war. S
- GAZETTE, 1860+: Established as a Republican paper by one Mitchell, who conducted it until the fall of 1860, when it was taken over by a joint stock company of Republicans, who changed the name to
- CENTRAL ILLINOISAN, +1861-April 5, 1883+: Managed by Logan U. Reavis for four or five years, then by the office foreman until March, 1867, when John S. Nicholson took charge. He became sole proprietor in June, 1868, and conducted the paper until April 5, 1883, when he sold to James G. Rice, owner of the Cass County Democrat, who merged the two papers as Illinoisan-Democrat. He sold in October to Eugene Clark, who rechristened the paper Beardstown Illinoisan, and sold to John S. Nicholson. Changed from weekly to semi-weekly, April, 1884. In April, 1899, united with Star of the West (established 1888 by H. C. Allard and made a daily March 7, 1892) as Illinoisan-Star, edited by Nicholson and published by Nicholson and Allard until 1902; since then by Nicholson and Fulks. It is now edited by J. S. and E. E. Nicholson. It has been consistently Republican. S
- HERALD, 1872-1873: Established by Henley Wilkinson and J. W. Lusk as an "out and out" Democratic paper willing to support Greeley to beat Grant. A county-seat fight and the election of Grant discouraged the proprietors, who sold early in 1873 to D. G. Swan, who made the paper Liberal Republican. It lasted but a few months, when it was removed to Bushnell.
- CHAMPION, September 25, 1875-1876: Established by George Dann, Sr., George Dann, Jr., and George W. Thompson, with the first named as editor. Independent in politics. Soon suspended.
- CASS COUNTY MESSENGER, 1876-1879+: Established by George Dann, Sr., as a Democratic paper. Before the end of the first year Forrest H. Mitchell was associated with Dann as editor and publisher, but withdrew in August, 1877, and was succeeded by

W. B. Bennett. Dann sold in 1879 to Joseph P. Sailer, who changed the name to CASS COUNTY DEMOCRAT, +1879-1883+: Democratic; conducted by Joseph P. Sailer until 1882, when J. Sam Fulks and George Martin became associated with him and they started a daily. It was unsuccessful, was sold in 1883 to Darb. McAulley, and by him to James G. Rice, who merged it with Central Illinoisan to form Illinoisan-Democrat.

BEOBACHTER AM ILLINOIS FLUSS, 1877-1878+: Established by Rev. A. Schaberhorn, who in the fall of 1878 sold to Theodore Wilkins, who changed the title to WOCHENBLATT, +1878-1882: Conducted by Theodore Wilkins until his death in 1881, when the paper was sold to Ross and Son, who removed it in 1882.

Fleming, 1849 —. Mr. Fleming changed it to a daily which was edited by Jehu Baker. It was in charge of and edited by John W. Merritt, 1850-1851; Judge Niles, late in 1851; E. H. Fleming and Mr. Niles, who bought and absorbed the Illinois Independent in 1852, when a daily was issued, 1851-1854; Mr. Fleming and James S. Coulter, 1854-1855; Mr. Coulter, 1855-1856; Judge Niles, 1856; Mr. Niles and Edward Schiller, 1856; Mr. Niles, 1856-1857; Collins Van Cleve and T. C. Weeden, 1857-1860. In 1860 E. J. Montague became proprietor. In 1861 the Newsletter of Mascoutah was consolidated with the Advocate; the title was made Weekly Belleville Advocate and News Letter, and Alexander G. Dawes became assistant editor. In the same year the property reverted to Van Cleve. Dawes soon retired and F. M. Hawes became editor. In October Weekly was dropped from the title. G. F. Kimball bought the paper in 1863. Hawes was still editor. In 1867 F. M. Taylor bought an interest. In 1872 Taylor bought out Kimball, and continued the paper till 1890, when he closed the office. J. H. Thomas bought the equipment and the paper was continued after a month, with G. F. Kimball as editor. He soon retired. The Advocate is now edited and published by Belleville Advocate Publishing Company. Originally Democratic, the paper had become Free Soil in 1857, and later Republican.

AEWSPHUF

PANTAGRAPH, +1853(?) to date: In June, 1854, Jacob Morris bought a half interest; C. P. Merriman became sole owner and editor in November, 1855. In 1855 he sold to William E. Foote, who, with E. J. Lewis as editor, continued it till January, 1860. Then in 1861 he was succeeded by Carpenter, Steele, and Briggs; then, in 1867, by John D. Scibird and Orin Waters; Jesse W. Fell, W. O. Davis and James P. Taylor, 1868. Editors since E. J. Lewis: William E. Foote, H. B. Norton, Thomas Moore, J. H. Burnham, F. J. Briggs, B. F. Diggs, E. R. Roe, J. B. Bates, W. O. Davis. Davis was publisher and proprietor, February 20, 1871, to December 18, 1907, when the property was incorporated, with W. O. Davis, president, H. O. Davis, vice-president, C. C. Marquis, secretary and treasurer. Started as a weekly, a daily was issued beginning June 19, 1854. After a few months it was changed to tri-weekly, till October, 1855. Weekly till February 23, 1857; daily and weekly ever since. Republican. The Pantagraph has long been one of the best known papers in Illinois because of its conservatism and reliability. The peculiar name is explained by C. P. Merriman as derived from panta, neuter accusative plural of the Greek adjunct pas, plus graph, imperative of grapho.

DEMOCRATIC REPOSITORY, 1847-1848: Edited by C. J. Sellon.

REGISTER, 1849 to date: For a few months it was edited by C. J. Sellon, and the next few months by Slaughter and Sharkey. With Mr. Sharkey as sole proprietor it was edited for a short time by John S. Winter. In 1849 Mr. Sharkey secured the services of John S. Brooks as editor, when it became a Democratic organ, being neutral before. It soon became neutral again, but opposed the Kansas-Nebraska bill. In 1856 it became Republican. In February, 1850, its publication ceased and the office fell into the hands of T. Maple, who, in August, 1850, sold it to Thomas J. Walker of Belleville, Illinois. He revived it and employed William H. Haskell as editor. M. A. L. Davidson became partner and editor. From 1852 to 1853 the paper was run by Mr. Nicolet and Mr. Davidson. In 1853 Mr. Davidson died and his interest was purchased by Alpheus Davison — it now became neutral as to politics. It was suspended for two months in 1862, both of its proprietors being in the army. In 1866 the firm name became Nicolet and Magie, issuing a Republican paper. Later the firm name was Magie and Tanquary; in 1875 Mr. Magie became sole proprietor. Jesse N. Berry and E. R. Magie, son of former editor, leased and edited it from 1877-1878, when James K. Magie and Son became its editors. In 1878 it favored the National Greenback party and lost its influence. Then C. E. Snively purchased it, changed it to a Republican organ, and has conducted it ever since. Files in the office. A daily was started in 1890. SUF

MACOUPIN COUNTY SPECTATOR, +1855-1868+: Edited by George H. Holliday, who made it a Democratic paper, 1855-1857; Charles E. Foote, 1857-1858; John F. Meginness, 1858-1861; Messrs. Shinkel and Gray, 1861-1862; Horace Gwin, 1862; J. R. Flynn and P. B. Vanderen, 1862. The last named soon became the responsible proprietor and editor and he continued it until 1868, when the Merritts of Springfield and J. A. I. Birdsell became possessed of it. Pending the negotiations between Foote and Meginness the Spectator was suspended from December 21, 1858, to January 12, 1859. The Merritts were connected with the paper for only a short time. Birdsell changed its name to

MACOUPIN TIMES, +1868-1871+: He remained its editor, 1868-1870; H. R. Whipple, 1870-1871. In 1871 the leading men of the Democratic party of Carlinsville concluded to form a joint stock company and publish a more thoroughly Democratic paper. The work of canvassing for the stock was assigned to Restores C. Smalley. When the stock was sold and the money raised, the company bought the Times printing office. The name of the paper was changed to MACOUPIN COUNTY ENQUIRER, +1871 to date: Edited by E. A. Snively, 1871-1877; Samuel Reed, 1877-1879. In 1873 the company leased the institution to Mr. Snively and he published it until 1877, when W. H. Reed leased it. In January, 1879, Reed was succeeded by E. A. Snively and L. C. Glessner, and in March, 1883, Mr. Glessner sold out to Mr. Snively, who soon sold the paper to E. B. Buck. In August, 1886, W. J. and C. J. Lumpkin took charge of the paper and eventually bought it. Since the death of W. J. Lumpkin a few years ago C. J. Lumpkin has been owner, editor, and publisher. When Messrs. Snively and Glessner succeeded Mr. Reed, they discontinued the Herald. The paper was semi-weekly until 1879. A daily was started in 1896. Democratic.

CLINTON COUNTY PIONEER, February, 1874-1878. Established by Hardin Case, George E. Doying, and John Schuster. It was issued from the Constitution-Union office. RANDOLPH COUNTY DEMOCRAT, 1857-1878: Editors and proprietors, Judge J. M. Ralls, 1857-1858; H. B. Nisbet and C. C. Clemens, who conducted it independent of politics, 1858-1860; Mr. Nisbet, who made it a Republican paper, 1860-1865; John W. Dean and M. W. Rotrock, 1865-1876; Mr. Dean and Mr. Nisbet, 1876-1878. H

EGYPTIAN PICKET GUARD, +1862-1867+: Founded by John R. Shannon and Robert McHenry. P. W. Baker helped organize the paper. In 1863 McHenry withdrew and the paper became a radical Southern partisan. In 1863 it was suspended for two months. Then the Democrats formed a stock company, purchased the paper, and dropped Egyptian from the title. S. St. Vrain was general manager, P. W. Baker was publisher, and John R. Shannon continued as editor. Shannon was so active in his criticism of the measures adopted to suppress the Rebellion that a body of soldiers broke into the office in July, 1864, and scattered the type in the streets. The office was refitted. In 1864 John McBride became proprietor. Shannon remained as editor. In 1865 William H. Toy succeeded McBride. In 1867 McHenry returned and assumed control, changing the name to VALLEY CLARION, +1867-1899+: Robert McHenry was editor and publisher until 1868, when he died. Robert E. Deitrich continued the publication until he was succeeded by William J. Armour. In 1869 Charles L. Spencer became editor and publisher; in 1875 he sold to John H. Lindsey and Company; in 1876 the firm was changed to Valley Clarion Printing Company. In 1876 John H. Lindsey sold out to Charles L. Spencer and John McBride; they remained proprietors with Spencer as editor until 1878, when John H. Lindsey purchased the interests of the company and became proprietor; he associated Robert E. Deitrich with him in the editorial department. In 1880 he sold to William H. Holmes. About 1886 Holmes sold to Frank R. McAtee, who a few years later changed the name to Chester Clarion, and in 1895 sold to James A. Matlack. He sold to William H. Matlack in 1896; Frank Moore bought the paper in 1898, and in 1899 sold to Frank R. McAtee, who merged the Clarion in the Herald, dropping the name of the former. The Herald was started in 1895 by F. W. Hempler and C. A. Smith, and sold in 1897 to Frank R. McAtee. Democratic.

- wild-cat and other fictitious paper money. It was the official paper of the town of Chicago. Because the needed supply of paper failed to arrive before the close of navigation, its publication was suspended from January 1 to May 20, 1835, with the exception of an issue January 21 and another on March 25. It appeared weekly to 1840, and daily, beginning February 24, 1840. It was a Democratic paper up to the time of the Kansas-Nebraska issue, but when the slavery question was again raised it assisted in the formation of the Republican party. On July 24, 1861, the Democrat was absorbed by the Tribune. WHAEF
- AMERICAN, June 8, 1835-1839+: A Whig paper, issued daily after April 9, 1839. Edited by T. O. Davis, 1835-1837; William Stuart and Company, 1837. Changed to EHNWA
- DAILY AMERICAN, +April 9, 1839-October 18, 1842: Edited by William Stuart, 1839-1841; Alexander Stuart, proprietor, and W. W. Brackett, editor, 1841-1842; Buckner S. Morris, July to October, 1842. ENHF
- COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER, October 11, 1836-1837: A rabid "liberty" paper, edited by Hooper Warren. In 1837 the printing outfit was removed to Lowell, LaSalle County, and used by Benjamin Lundy and Zebina Eastman in publishing the Genius of Universal Emancipation and Genius of Liberty.
- VOICE OF THE PEOPLE, June 9-August, 1838: A campaign paper published weekly at the office of the American, until after the August election, by the Whig Young Men's Association. A
- HARD CIDER PRESS, June 6-October 24, 1840: A Harrison campaign paper published weekly by William Stuart from the American office. H
- WEEKLY TRIBUNE, April 4, 1840-August 21, 1841: Published by Charles N. Holcomb and Company, with E. G. Ryan as editor. In 1841 it was sold to Elisha Starr of Milwaukee, and the Milwaukee Journal was its successor. H
- UNION AGRICULTURIST AND WESTERN PRAIRIE FARMER, January, 1841-1843+: Established by the Union Agricultural Society, and edited in the beginning by the corresponding secretary, John S. Wright. At the close of the second volume the publication passed from the society to John S. Wright, with whom J. Ambrose Wight became associated as editor. The title was changed to E
- PRAIRIE FARMER, +January 1, 1843 to date: The scope of the paper was enlarged to include mechanics and education. John Gage was the first editor of the mechanics department. At the beginning of 1851 Luther Haven became part owner, and was associated with Wright in publishing, and with Wright and Wight in editing the paper. In 1852 Wright and Haven were editors and publishers; J. Ambrose Wight was editor, John A. Kennicott, horticultural editor in 1853-1857; Wright and Wight were publishers, 1853-1857. A new series was begun January, 1857, at which time publication became weekly instead of monthly as theretofore. October 1, 1858, James C. and William H. Medill sold the property to Emery and Company; Henry D. Emery and Charles D. Bragdon became editors; Kennicott remained horticultural editor. Mr. Emery united his Journal of Agriculture and the Prairie Farmer as Emery's Journal of Agriculture and Prairie Farmer, October 7, continuing publication under this title until January 1, 1859, when Prairie Farmer was resumed. In 1861 W. W. Corbett replaced Bragdon as one of the editors. In 1867 the Prairie Farmer Company became publishers; in 1868 Henry T. Thomas came in as a third editor; in 1869 Rodney Welch was added. In 1879 Jonathan Periam was editor and continued in that office until 1884, when Orange Judd became editor and manager. He was succeeded in 1889 by Jonathan Periam, who served as editor until 1903. James J. Edgerton was editor throughout 1904; on March 20, 1905, C. P. Reynolds became editor, and has been so to date. The stock of the Prairie Farmer Company was bought by Rand, McNally and Company and incorporated as the Prairie Farmer Publishing Company, February 16, 1882. They disposed of their stock to Burrige D. Butler on April 8, 1908. Mr. Butler is president of the company and publisher. The paper is now published semi-monthly. (See p. 73.)

WDSUHE

EXPRESS, October 24, 1842-April 20, 1844: Edited by William W. Brackett. It was sold in 1844 to a company and discontinued. Supported Henry Clay for president. The Journal was established in its stead. Daily and weekly. N

NORTHWESTERN BAPTIST, September 15, 1842-September 15, 1844: A semi-monthly edited by Thomas Powell. Only forty-eight numbers were issued. This was the first religious publication in Chicago. H

QUID NUNC, July 12-August 16, 1842: Edited by Davis S. Griswold and published by Ellis, Fergus, and Company. It was devoted to the advancement of literature, the fine arts, science, commerce, agriculture, and the mechanical arts. No communications on religion or politics were admitted. It is said to have been the first one-cent daily published west of the Alleghanies. At first intended as a morning paper it was issued at noon. A

- REPUBLICAN, 1842-1844: Edited by A. R. Niblo, 1842-1843; F. W. Cleveland, 1843-1844. It was established to create a public sentiment favoring the re-election of President Tyler. F
- WESTERN CITIZEN, July, 1842-October, 1853+: A temperance and anti-slavery paper edited by Zebina Eastman and Asa B. Brown, 1842-1845; Eastman and Davidson, 1845-1849; Eastman and McClellan, 1849-1852; Mr. Eastman, with Hooper Warren as associate, 1852-1853. This was the organ of the Liberty Party in Illinois, and successor to the Genius of Liberty, the subscription list of which paper it took over. See Lowell, Genius of Liberty and Genius of Universal Emancipation; also Alton, Truth Seeker. In 1853 the name was changed to AEHF
- FREE WEST, +December 1, 1853-July 19, 1855+: Edited by E. Goodman, Hooper Warren, and Zebina Eastman. Although the paper was announced in Western Citizen of October 18 to begin October 25, it did not appear until December 1. The names of the editors are not printed after the issue of October 12, 1854, until November 23, when Z. Eastman is given as editor and publisher, E. Goodman and H. Warren associate editors. Their names disappear in the issue of July 12, 1855. The last issue announced that the paper would be merged with the Tribune. Established as the avowed organ of the Freedom Party of Illinois; beginning with the issue of November 23, 1854, the paper carried the statement that "this journal does not profess to be the organ of any party or sect." It was strongly anti-slavery, however. H
- YOUTH'S GAZETTE, May-July 23, 1843: Edited by Kiler K. Jones. It was "devoted expressly to the interests of the youth of the west." Eight numbers were issued, weekly. H
- BETTER COVENANT, +1843-1847: A religious paper, established at Rockford; taken soon to St. Charles and thence to Chicago, being published at Rockford and St. Charles from January 6, 1842, to April 6, 1843. Edited by Rev. Seth Barnes, 1843-1844; Rev. William Rounseville and Cyrus B. Ingham, 1844-1845; Mr. Ingham, 1845-1847. In 1847 it was sold to John A. Gurley of the Star of the West, Cincinnati, Ohio. Issued weekly. (See Better Covenant, Rockford and St. Charles.) H
- DEMOCRAT ADVOCATE AND COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER, February 3, 1844-1846: Publishers and proprietors were Messrs. Ellis and Fergus; nominally without an editor. It was the corporation paper, 1844-1845. UF
- GEM OF THE PRAIRIE, May 29, 1844-1852+: A literary paper edited by Kiler K. Jones and James S. Beach, 1844-1845; J. Campbell and T. A. Stewart, 1845; T. A. Stewart, 1845-1846; Mr. Stewart and James Kelly, 1846-1850; Messrs. Scripps and

Stewart, 1850-1852, with Stewart, Waite and Company as publishers. It was devoted to literary miscellany and information. In length of life it surpassed all other early periodicals of predominantly literary tone. Its motto was "To please be ours." In 1847 the proprietors, in order to meet a growing demand for news alone, established the Chicago Daily Tribune, as an offshoot to the Gem of the Prairie. The latter paper was continued under the same name until 1852, when it was merged in the Tribune, and published as the Sunday edition of that paper, with the title Chicago Sunday Tribune. HUF

ILLINOIS MEDICAL AND SURGICAL JOURNAL, 1844-1846+: This was the first medical journal issued in Chicago. Edited by Dr. James V. Z. Blaney, in the interest of Rush Medical College, and printed by Ellis and Fergus, 1844-1846. It was a monthly paper, 1844-1846; bi-monthly, 1846-—. In 1846 the Journal was christened

ILLINOIS AND INDIANA MEDICAL AND SURGICAL JOURNAL, +1846-1848+: Its editors were Drs. Blaney, Daniel Brainard, William B. Herrick, and John Evans. It was published in Chicago by Ellis and Fergus and in Indianapolis by C. B. Davis. In 1848 the paper became known as the H

NORTHWESTERN MEDICAL AND SURGICAL JOURNAL, +1848-December, 1857+: It continued under the same editorial management, but was published in Chicago by William Ellis and in Indianapolis by John D. Defrees. In 1849 W. B. Herrick and John Evans appeared as editors with J. W. Dugan, Chicago and Indianapolis, as sole publisher. The subsequent year John Evans and Edwin G. Meek comprised the editorial staff, with C. A. Swan as printer. In 1851 the same editors appear with James L. Langdon, Chicago and Indianapolis, as printer. In 1852 John Evans was editor, and Langdon and Rounds printers. In this year another new series was commenced, being issued monthly. W. B. Herrick was editor, assisted by H. A. Johnson, with Ballantyne and Company as printers. Dr. N. S. Davis became editor in May, 1854, with Dr. Johnson assistant, and A. B. Case, publisher, who in 1856 was succeeded by Robert Fergus. In 1857 Dr. Davis was sole editor, Barnet and Clarke printers. The December number, 1857, terminated the magazine under the name of the Northwestern Medical and Surgical Journal. It was continued as the HJ

CHICAGO MEDICAL JOURNAL, +1858-September, 1875+: Daniel Brainard was publisher in 1859 and 1860, and the Journal was monthly. In 1869 it was semi-monthly. J. Adams Allen, M.D., LL.D., was editor at that date; C. N. Goodell, publisher. The periodical was still devoted to the interests of Rush Medical College. J. Adams Allen and Walter Hay, M.D., were editors, 1870-1875; W. B. Keen, Cooke and Company, publishers. The Journal became the

Wilson became connected with the paper and later became publisher. Charles L. Wilson was succeeded as editor by Andrew Shuman. Mr. Shuman was editor from 1861 to 1864, and again from 1878 to 1888; W. K. Sullivan, 1888. In 1893 the paper was sold to Dr. S. F. Farrar, who formed a company with himself as president and treasurer, Slason Thompson, editor, J. R. Wilson, publisher. There was, beside the daily and weekly, a tri-weekly edition which was continued until after 1881. For a number of years John C. Eastman has been editor, the Chicago Journal Company, publishers. Until after 1881 the paper was listed as Republican; it is now Independent. It is now called Evening Journal. EDACNSUHF

GARLAND OF THE WEST, 1845: It was projected by Robert N. Garrett and Nelson W. Fuller. But one copy seems to have been issued, that of July 30.

DAILY NEWS, latter part of 1845-January 6, 1846: A liberty paper managed by Eastman and Davidson, with S. W. Chapel assistant editor. This was the first daily issued without a weekly edition.

SPIRIT OF TEMPERANCE REFORM, 1845: Started by J. E. Ware. It soon died.

VOLKSFREUND, 1845-1848: The pioneer German paper of Chicago. Edited by Robert B. Hoeffgen.

WESTERN (LITERARY ?) MAGAZINE, October, 1845-October, 1846: The first literary magazine published in Chicago, was first issued in October, 1845, by Rounseville and Company. In the belief "that the western people were able and willing to support a magazine of their own," William Rounseville undertook the development of western literary talent. His hopes were not fully realized and he sold the magazine after the publication of ten numbers. John J. Moon, the purchaser, published but two numbers, beginning September, 1846. H

ARIEL, 1846: Published for a short time with Edward Augustus as editor and C. H. Boner as publisher.

NORTHWESTERN EDUCATOR AND MAGAZINE OF LITERATURE AND SCIENCE, January, 1847-1849: A monthly, edited and published by James L. Enos and D. L. Curtiss. In the issue of February, 1849, James L. Enos is given as editor and publisher. He writes editorially in that number concerning the influence of the Educator: "It was commenced under the most unfavorable circumstances, in a country where no like publication had ever circulated, where the people were comparatively little imbued with a love for education — or at least, that inculcated by professional teachers — and with the privations incident to a new country pressing heavily upon them; yet, notwithstanding these difficulties, the influence of the Educator has steadily increased, and within the last three months the circulation has nearly doubled." The objects of the magazine were to expose the dangers of fallacious theories of education, and to set forth and to defend the true principles of instruction. Vol. III, no. 2 owned by Frank W. Scott, Urbana, Illinois. S

PORCUPINE, winter of 1847-1848: Edited by Charles Bowen and Thomas Bradbury.

TRIBUNE, 1847 to date: Established by Joseph K. C. Forrest, James J. Kelly and John E. Wheeler. Messrs. Forrest and Kelly very early retired and Thomas A. Stewart became editor. In 1847 the Gem of the Prairie was absorbed by the Tribune and became the Sunday edition of that paper. The Tribune was managed by Wheeler, Stewart and Scripps, 1848-1851; T. J. Waite, manager, Wm. Duane Wilson, editor, 1852-1853. Gen. Wilson's interest was purchased by March 23, 1853, Henry Fowler, Timothy Wright and Gen. J. D. Webster. On June 18, 1853, Joseph Medill came from Cleveland and purchased a share in the paper, whereupon the issue was made under the auspices of Wright, Medill, and Company, and Stephen J. Staples is specified in the directory for 1853-1854 as assistant editor. On July 21, 1855, Thomas A. Stewart retired from the partnership, and September 23, Dr. C. H. Ray and J. C. Vaughn were editors. At the same time Alfred Cowles became a member of the firm, which was then composed of Messrs. Medill, Ray, Wright, Webster, Vaughn, and Cowles. Under the vigorous influence of Dr. Ray the paper soon became of primary importance in Chicago and Illinois. It was one of the first to endorse the formation of the Republican party in Illinois, and did much to bring about the successful organization of that party, and the nomination and election of Lincoln in 1860. March 26, 1857, Mr. Vaughn withdrew and the partnership name became Ray, Medill, and Company. In 1858 the Tribune, being consolidated with the Daily Democratic Press, was known as the Press and Tribune, issued by the proprietors of both papers (see Democratic Press). In 1861 the word Press was dropped and the Tribune Company was organized. Scripps, Cross, Ray, Medill, and Cowles were the principal stockholders. In 1861 the Tribune absorbed the Democrat. In 1866 Horace White, who had previously been connected with the paper and had acquired the stock of Mr. Scripps, became editor. He was succeeded in 1874 by Joseph Medill. Under White the Tribune had supported Horace Greeley, but Medill brought it back into the Republican fold, where it has remained, though manifesting a considerable independence.¹ Mr. Medill died in March, 1899, and was succeeded as editor by R. W. Patterson, who was editor until his death, on April 1, 1910. The Tribune has been since 1908 in direct charge of Medill McCormick. It has been a daily from its beginning. For many years it had also semi-weekly, tri-weekly, and weekly editions, all of which have been discontinued. The file at the office of the Tribune is complete from about 1860. File, 1861-1876, in Boston Athenæum.

WATCHMAN OF THE PRAIRIES, 1847-1853+: First weekly Baptist newspaper published in Chicago. It strongly opposed slavery. Edited by Rev. Luther Stone and published by Messrs. Walker and Worrall, of the Western Herald (which see). In 1849 Wight and Cross became its publishers. In 1853 Mr. Stone sold the paper to Dr. J. C. Burroughs, Levi D. Boone and A. D. ¹The Tribune followed closely the lead of Greeley and the New York Tribune in urging, immediately after the defeat of General Scott for the presidency in 1852, that the Whig party had lost its usefulness; and, after the Kansas-Nebraska bill had been passed in 1854, took the lead in the West, as Greeley and the New York Tribune did in the East, in agitating a union, in the Republican party, of all anti-slavery and anti-Nebraska elements.

"In 1856 I made as strong a fight for Fremont as was in my power," Medill wrote, "worked for Abraham Lincoln against Stephen A. Douglas for senator in 1858; printed verbatim the great debates in which these two men were engaged, and in 1859 began pushing Mr. Lincoln for the presidency."

In 1860 the Tribune put forth every effort for the nomination and election of Lincoln, and after war broke out, was the most influential Union newspaper west of New York City. It urged Lincoln to issue an emancipation proclamation, opposed Johnson's reconstruction policy, upheld the impeachment proceedings, defended the reconstruction acts of Congress, and supported Grant in 1868. Under Horace White the Tribune was vigorously opposed to a policy of extremely high protective tariffs, and not until 1874, when Medill secured control and the editorship, did it support the prevailing policy of the dominant party. Under Medill it was for many years a high-tariff paper, but it has long occupied a position of great independence in both local and national affairs, and has gained, especially under the editorship of Robert W. Patterson, a wide independent following.

In 1855 Mr. Church became sole proprietor. The copy for February 2, 1854, volume 1, number 23, contains correspondence in relation to the origin of Shurtleff College, which tends to show that J. M. Peck was given much of the credit due to Hubbell Loomis, who did a large amount in laying the foundations of the college in Alton while Peck was at Rock Spring. FREE SOIL BANNER, April-November, 1848: A campaign paper issued by the Western Citizen to support Van Buren and the Free Soil party.

ILLINOIS STAATS-ZEITUNG, April, 1848 to date: Established by Robert Bernhard Hoeffgen. He was soon succeeded as editor by Dr. Hellmuth; Arno Voss, 1848-1849; Herman Kriege, 1849-1850; Geo. Schneider with Mr. Hoeffgen as manager, 1850-1852; Schneider and Hillgaertner, 1852-1854; Schneider and Schlaeger, 1854. Subsequently H. Beinder and Daniel Hertle became incorporated with the editorial staff, but Mr. Schneider was the animating spirit. At first it was a weekly, but under Mr. Kriege it was made a semi-weekly and then tri-weekly. In 1851 Mr. Schneider made it a daily. In 1854 the publication of the Sonntag Zeitung was begun. In 1862 Schneider sold his interest to Lorenz Brentano, who became editor. A. C. Hesing became sole owner in 1867; Herman Raster became editor, and remained in that position until 1891, when he was succeeded by William Rapp. Hesing was succeeded in the management by his son, Washington Hesing. By 1874 the Sunday edition had been changed to Der Westen. The Illinois Staats-Zeitung Company were editors and publishers, and in politics the paper was Independent. In 1881 the weekly edition and Der Westen were listed as Independent, the daily edition as Independent-Republican. By 1907 the Sunday edition had been changed to Westen Und Daheim. Since then the daily, Sunday, and weekly editions have been Independent-Republican. The Illinois Publishing Company are publishers. The entire stock of this company, which was owned by Mrs. Herman Raster and Richard Michaelis, is owned at present by Walter R. Michaelis¹ and Horace L. Brand. The Staats-Zeitung was active in urging the movement which resulted in the formation of the Republican party. It strenuously opposed the Kansas-Nebraska Bill and the extension of slavery. ENAHUC

LADY'S WESTERN MAGAZINE, December, 1848-1849: Edited by Benjamin F. Taylor and J. S. Hurlbut; published by Charles L. Wilson. Mr. Taylor, the editor-in-chief, was a man of real literary genius, but did not command sufficient business resources to continue the paper long. It was established in imitation of several "ladies' magazines" published in New York and Philadelphia.

NEW COVENANT, 1848-1880+: A Universalist church publication. Edited by Rev. W. E. Mauley and Rev. J. M. Day, 1848-1849; S. P. Skinner, 1849-1855; L. B. Mason, 1855-1859, D. R. Livermore, 1859-1869. According to Mr. Boss, Mrs. Mary Livermore was "real editor" during the period, 1859-1869. In May 1869, Rev. J. W. Hanson, D.D., and Rev. Selden Gilbert became owners. In September of that year, the Northwestern Universalist Publishing House became the publishers, with J. W. Hansen, D.D., as editor and Mr. Gilbert, business manager. In October, 1871, Dr. Hanson became both manager and editor. Rev. W. A. Start was business manager for 1874, but in 1875 Dr. Hanson was again manager and editor. He remained so until 1883, with the Northwestern Universalist Publishing House continuing as publishers. FRIHED'S BANNERET, 1852-1853: First Norwegian paper published in Chicago. Edited by Mouritzon and Kjoss.

LITERARY BUDGET, 1852-1855+: Published monthly by William Weaver Danenhower, a bookseller, who established the paper as a medium for the advertising of books and periodicals. After seven monthly issues it was changed, January 7, 1854, to a weekly, with Benjamin F. Taylor as editor. T. H. Whipple appeared as associate editor in the same year. In its weekly form the Budget grew into a "literary journal of distinct merit," concentrating its attention upon matters concerning the West. It states editorially, "A new field is open to authorship. . . . The West is full of subject-matter for legend, story or history. . . . All that is lacking is a proper channel. This channel we offer. The Budget claims to be a western literary paper, and we invite writers to send us articles on western subjects, for publication." The paper was continued until 1855. In the summer of that year Mr. Danenhower "became state leader of the 'Native American' or 'Know-Nothing' party, which had during the year preceding carried two eastern commonwealths and had shown strength in the middle states. He announced that the Budget would 'close its existence,' that he would 'launch his bark' once more, and that his numerous readers would receive the Weekly Native Citizen. As a spokesman of the reaction against the immigration due to the Irish famine and the continental revolutions of 1848 and 1849, he wrote vehemently. With the Budget's last breath he said: 'We trust that our future exertions will be such as to exemplify to the world that the pure fire of American sentiment is sweeping over our vast prairies; that hereafter America shall and must be governed by Americans.'"¹ H

"EDITOR OF THE CHRONICLE: In your issue of this morning you have an article on the Chicago Times. Being an Illinoisan, I happen to know that much of the article is incorrect. As I remember, upon the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, the Democratic newspapers at Chicago went over to the opposition. Thereupon the Times was established by the friends of the administration, Senator Douglas being the most prominent in establishing it. A man by the name of James Sheahan, from this city, was its first and only editor nearly if not quite all the remainder of the senator's life. On the political separation between Mr. Buchanan and Senator Douglas, the Times adhered to the senator, and was the ablest paper in his support through his senatorial contest with Mr. Lincoln. Since the last presidential election certainly, perhaps since Senator Douglas's death, Mr. Sheahan left the Times; the Times since then has been identical with the Times before then in little more than the name. The writer hereof is not well enough posted to say but that your article in other respects is correct."—Complete Works of Abraham Lincoln, viii, 292, 293.

CHICAGO TIMES, + June 20, 1861—March 4, 1895+: After the emancipation proclamation, the Times ceased to favor the prosecution of the war, and was bitter in its denunciations of Lincoln's administration. It became such a radical "copperhead sheet" that General Ambrose E. Burnside, in command of the Department of the Northwest, with headquarters at Cincinnati, issued an order for the suppression of the Times, and the commander at Camp Douglas was charged with the execution of the order. On the morning of June 3, 1863, soldiers marched into the press room and took possession. Mass meetings were held during the day in advocacy of free speech and a free press. A petition to President Lincoln to revoke the order was signed by some of the most prominent Republicans and business men of the city, and Senator Lyman Trumbull and Isaac N. Arnold telegraphed personally to Mr. Lincoln to the same effect. The order was revoked by the President and publication was resumed June 5. After the presidential campaign of 1868 the Times ceased to be a party organ, claimed to be Independent, and made many vigorous onslaughts on the Democratic party. However, it supported the Democratic candidates of 1876, 1880 and 1884. In the fall of 1863, Franc B. Wilkie joined the editorial staff, and in 1867 André Matteson became a part of the editorial force for the second time. Ananias Worden was manager from 1861 to 1865; H. B. Chandler, 1865-1870; Mr. Storey became sole owner in 1870, and made A. L. Patterson manager. The establishment was destroyed in the great fire of 1871, but reappeared very soon after. Mr. Storey, who had been the leading spirit of the paper for over twenty years, died in October, 1884; the paper went into the hands of a receiver and was sold in 1887 to a new Chicago Times Company headed by James J. West, who was manager. He was ousted later, and succeeded by Huiskamp Brothers, with Joseph R. Dunlap as editor. In 1891 Carter H. Harrison formed the Newspaper Company and bought the Times. Carter H. Harrison, Jr., was made business manager, and Preston Harrison managing editor. March 4, 1895, it was joined to the Herald—hence Times-Herald, which on March 28, 1901, was consolidated with the Record as the Record-Herald.

- PRAIRIE LEAF, 1856- —(?) : A monthly, issued for a short time by D. B. Cooke and Company.
- DAILY PRICE CURRENT, 1856-1857.
- ROUNDS' PRINTERS CABINET, 1856 to date (1881): Published by Rounds and Langdon. In December, 1856, there was but one other journal in the United States that was devoted exclusively to the interest of the 'art preservative'—the Typographical Advertiser; Rounds' Cabinet was the first of that character in the northwest, the second in the United States in its date of issue, and the first monthly typographical journal in the Union. It is not listed in Rowell, 1869, but is given as an advertising sheet in newspaper directories, 1873-1876, with S. P. Rounds as publisher. Listed in Ayer, 1881, as a quarterly advertising sheet.
- SVENSKA REPUBLIKANEN (Den Svenska Republikanen i Norra Amerika), +September, 1857-July, 1858: Established by the leaders of the Bishop Hill colony at Galva, and edited by S. Cronsioe. It was soon turned over to Cronsioe as his private property, and removed to Chicago. It was antagonistic to Hemlandet, and ultra liberal as to religion,—so much so that the name came to be in bad odor among a large class of the Swedish people.
- SUNDAY VACUNA, Spring of 1856- —(?) : The first exclusively Sunday paper in Chicago; named for the goddess of rural leisure.

- WESTERN ENTERPRISE, 1856-1857+: An agricultural weekly; merged in the Prairie Farmer. Edited by E. Porter Little.
- Western Journal of Music, 1856-1857: Semi-monthly. Edited by William H. Currie, and published by R. G. Greene. It was a paper "devoted to literature and art . . . to the advancement of musical knowledge and interest, in the western states particularly."
- EVANGEL, 1857(?)—(?) : Edited by J. G. Wilson. Mentioned in the city directory for 1857.
- LE JOURNAL DE L'ILLINOIS, 1857-1858: First issued in Kankakee as a weekly on January 2, 1857, by A. Grandpré and Claude Petit, being the first French newspaper published in the state. In September, 1857, it was moved to Chicago under the same management. For one month it was issued semi-weekly, after which it was changed back to weekly.
- DAILY LEDGER, 1857: Published by Barnes, Stewart, and Paine. Seth Paine was editor.
- CHICAGO MAGAZINE, THE WEST AS IT IS, March-August, 1857: Founded by the Mechanics' Institute, an organization for night-study, the object being partly to secure exchanges gratis for its library. Zebina Eastman was the editor; John Gager and Company were the publishers. The magazine was devoted to literature, biography, historical reminiscence, etc. Mr. H. E. Fleming mentions it as "the literary-historical magazine of highest tone." It was beautifully and profusely illustrated, and though it carried as many advertisements as were usual at that time, its expenses were greater than its receipts. The five numbers published were got out with increasing difficulty, and the magazine expired in August. According to Andreas, the failure was a great loss to the literary interests of the city. - EMERY'S JOURNAL OF AGRICULTURE, January 1-October 7, 1858+: Edited by Henry D. Emery and Charles D. Bragdon. With vol. 2, no. 15 (Prairie Farmer, vol. 18, no. 41), October 7, 1858, Mr. Emery, who had bought the Prairie Farmer, October 1, continued the paper as Emery's Journal of Agriculture and Prairie Farmer, October 7, 1858-January, 1859. January 1, 1859, he shortened the title to the original Prairie Farmer, and continued the publication. (See p. 54.) WH
- HERALD May, 1858-September, 1860+: Established by Isaac Cook and Charles N. Pine as a Buchanan administration organ to antagonize the Times, which supported Douglas. In 1859 it was sold to Cyrus H. McCormick. The Times was bought by McCormick in September, 1860, and the first number of the Daily Times and Herald was issued September 8. This paper was maintained through the campaign of 1860 as an extreme exponent of State Rights Democracy. Ex-Governor E. W. McComas was editor first of the Herald, later of the Times and Herald. An advertisement of the Herald before the consolidation announces that the paper will continue "an organ of Democratic thought and an exponent of constitutional principles. It will advocate the equal rights of the people and the fraternal union of the States. . . . Its motto is 'Principles, not Men.' As a commercial, mechanical, literary and moral newspaper, it will be inferior to none in the West. Nothing will be allowed in its columns that will cause a blush to the most rigidly pure." (See Times.) A
- NORTHWESTERN PRAIRIE FARMER, October 7, 1858 to date (1860): Established by James C. Medill, editor, and William S. Honnold, publisher, who apparently did not wish to be included among those who sold their good will to H. D. Emery with the Prairie Farmer. The Northwestern Prairie Farmer used the same slogan that the Prairie Farmer had used: "Farmers, write for your paper." Charles Betts appeared as an editor some time after the establishment of the paper, which is found in the directory for 1859 and 1860. E

NORTHWESTERN QUARTERLY MAGAZINE, October, 1858: Edited by James Grant Wilson and published by Rufus Blanchard. A serious magazine, "the most ambitious of the kind ever attempted in Chicago, and quite pretentious for so early a date . . ." In telling of the aims of the magazine the editors said that "the broad fields of literature" were to be traversed "and the progress of fine arts to be traced." The financial embarrassment of Mr. Blanchard in another publication enterprise prevented the appearance of a second number of the Quarterly, even though the material for it was in the proof. H

DET RÄTTA HEMLANDET, +1858-1873+: Established in Galesburg in 1856 as a monthly devotional paper, it was removed to Chicago in 1858. Its editors to 1873 were the same as for Hemlandet. Merged in HEMLANDET, DET GAMLA OCH DET NYE, +January 7, 1858 to date: A Swedish Lutheran paper, published at Galesburg from January 3, 1855, to 1858, when it was moved to Chicago. It was edited by Rev. T. N. Hasselquist, 1855-1858; Dr. Eric Norelius, assisted by Jonas Engberg, 1859; Norelius was succeeded by Erland Carlsson, assisted by Engberg. Carlsson turned the work over to Engberg, 1863-1864; Dr. A. R. Cervin, 1864-1868; J. G. Princll, January-July, 1869; P. A. Sundelius, 1869; Johan Alfred Enander, 1869-1872; Enander and G. A. Bohman, 1872-1889. The firm was dissolved in 1889, and was succeeded by the Hemlandet Publishing Company, 1890. In 1891 Hemlandet was sold to A. E. Johnson with J. N. Söderholm as partner, editor-in-chief, and manager, 1891-1896; in 1896 Johnson bought out Söderholm, organized the Hemlandet Company with himself as president, and Johan Alfred Enander again became editor. In 1869 the character of the paper was changed from a mainly religious to a general newspaper. Republican and still devoted to the interests of the Lutheran church.

PEOPLES' JOURNAL OF HEALTH, 1864(?) to date (1865): Issued monthly. Dr. Juston Hayes and Dr. C. R. Blackwell were publishers.

- SANDEBUDET, + December, 1864 to date: Removed to Chicago from Rockford, where it was established as a fortnightly Swedish Methodist paper by Victor Wittig on July 18, 1862. After a year and a half Albert Ericson became editor and remained so until November, 1864, when the M. E. Book Concern took over the publication and removed it to Chicago, where it was published by Poe and Hitchcock beginning December 8. In August, 1863, it was changed to a weekly. Victor Wittig became editor 1865; and Albert Ericson again 1867-1871. It was suspended for about a year after the fire; reappeared October 14, 1872, with N. O. Westergreen as editor; William Henschen, 1875-1882; Victor Wittig, 1882-1889; William Henschen, 1889-1898; H. K. Elmström, 1898-1902; William Henschen, 1902 to date. In 1889 Sändebudet passed into the control of the Swedish M. E. Book Concern, which merged Väktaren (begun 1888) in the older paper. Independent in politics.
- TEMPLAR'S OFFERING, 1864(?) to date (1867): Cowdery and Law were publishers, 1864-1865, and Rolla A. Law was publisher, 1866-1867.
- UNION BANNER AND COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER, 1864(?): Published by W. S. Spencer and Company.
- UNITED STATES REVIEW, 1864 to date (1876): Issued semi-monthly and devoted to insurance. It was dated for Philadelphia and Chicago in 1875. R. R. Deardon was publisher in 1875, and editor and publisher in 1876.
- BEE, 1865(?)—(?) : A daily, published by Pigott and Fowler.
- CITY EVENING NEWS, 1865(?)—(?) : A daily, published by J. M. Climie.
- COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER AND COUNTING ROOM MANUAL, 1865(?) —(?) : John R. Robinson was publisher in 1865.

- HOME CIRCLE AND TEMPERANCE ORACLE, 1865 to date (1871): A monthly, devoted to "literature, temperance, morality, and the people." S. M. Kennedy was editor and publisher in 1869, and in 1871. A paper called Home Circle is mentioned in the directory for 1878-1879.
- LITERARY MESSENGER, October 14, 1865—(?) : "A journal devoted to the interests of the Northwest." "Arts, literature, science, news, fashions and amusements" were included in its pages. The literary element predominated at first, and was creditable. A story by Mrs. M. L. Rayne was begun in the first number. The editor's name was not given.

LITTLE CORPORAL, July, 1865-1875: A monthly, in journal form, devoted to secular, juvenile literature. Its motto was: "Fighting against Wrong, and for the Good and the True and the Beautiful." This excellent magazine was originally published for the United States Sanitary Commission in connection with a fair. Its success and popularity encouraged its continuance for a decade. It was the first periodical from Chicago to secure wide attention, and the first juvenile in the country to be read by children everywhere. It was the forerunner of St. Nicholas, of New York, and influenced for the better the character of the Youth's Companion of Boston. The names of the editors and publishers are as follows: Alfred L. Sewell, editor and publisher, 1865; Sewell and Edward Eggleston, editors, A. L. Sewell, publisher, 1866-1868; Sewell and Emily Huntington Miller, editors, Sewell, publisher, 1868-1869; Sewell and Emily H. Miller, editors, Sewell and Miller, publishers, 1870; Sewell and E. H. Miller, editors, Alfred L. Sewell and Company, publishers, 1871; Emily Huntington Miller, editor, and John E. Miller, publisher, 1872-1875. Edward Eggleston and Frances E. Willard were frequent contributors. In April, 1872, Work and Play, of Springfield, Mass., was absorbed. The circulation of the Little Corporal was remarkably large in the early years, but the advertising was not correspondingly developed, and after a gradual decline, the publication ceased in 1875. Vols. 15 and 16, 1872 and 1873, are in the Evanston Public Library. H

POST, September 4, 1865-1874+: A Republican paper, daily and weekly, which until February 3, 1866, was published as the Post. Then it appeared as Evening Post, and later as the Chicago Post, but the title Evening Post seems to have prevailed after December 14, 1866. Established by William Pigott, who used the paper successfully to effect the election of the "soldiers' ticket." At first it was published by Pigott and Stanley G. Fowler, but after a few months it was bought by David Blakely, who associated with him in the business department his brother, C. H. Blakely. For a short time General Hasbrouck Davis was editor. In 1867 the Post Printing Company was organized and Charles H. Ray was made editor. In the same year William H. Schuyler became manager. In 1869 Schuyler sold his interest to McMullen Brothers, and J. B. McMullen became manager. Ray died in 1870. Late in 1873 controlling stock was bought by Woodbury M. Taylor and the Post was consolidated with the Mail to form the HE

POST AND MAIL, + January, 1874-1876+: Daily and weekly. In 1876 the Post and Mail was continued as the HUC

CHICAGO POST, + 1876-August, 1878: Woodbury M. Taylor was president of the owning company, and was manager until December, 1877, although McMullen Brothers were publishers for several months in 1877. In 1878, while organizing a new company, Oliver A. Willard, a leading stockholder, died. The paper was continued for a few months by his sister, Frances E. Willard, after which it was sold, August, 1878, to the News. C

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, 1865 to date (1895): A spiritualist paper issued weekly. Early in 1867 a successor to the Religio-Philosophical Journal was announced to appear under the name of Spiritual Republic. It was not to be "tied to any sect or party . . ." The editors purposed to "correct all the evil of the world and set things in general to rights." Except for one mention of it in the city directory for 1869, there is no evidence that this paper appeared. The old name was being used, moreover, in 1869, according to Rowell's newspaper directory for that year, which gives S. S. Jones as editor and the Religio-Philosophical Publishing Association as publishers. S. S. Jones was editor and publisher, 1870-1877, and proprietor, 1873-1875. In 1879 and 1880, John C. Bundy was editor and manager. EHUW

REPUBLICAN, May 30, 1865-March, 1872: A daily established by an imposing list of stockholders, who were dissatisfied with the Tribune, including Ira Y. Munn, John V. Farwell, J. K. C. Forrest, and J. Y. Scammon of Chicago; Jesse K. Dubois and Jacob Bunn of Springfield; John Wood of Quincy; J. Wilson Shaffer of Freeport; A. C. Babcock of Canton; A. W. Mock of Kankakee; and Henry Childs of Du Page county. The company bought the plant — and the Associated Press franchise — of the Morning Post. Charles A. Dana was made editor, A. W. Mock, publisher. Dana did not assume his duties until well on in July. In just one year these gentlemen withdrew. Dana was not happy in the position, and not enough money was put into the enterprise to put it properly on its feet. A brief suspension followed the change of management. The stock was now controlled by Bunn and Dubois; a new company was formed; V. B. Denslow was made editor, George D. Williston, manager, and publication was resumed August 5, 1865. After one year Denslow withdrew and James F. Ballantyne became editor. He was succeeded by Henry M. Smith, and he by John G. Nicolay in 1869. In 1870 Bunn, having become sole owner, sold to a company consisting of Joseph B. McCullagh, John R. Walsh, H. N. Hibbard, and William H. Schuyler. Burned out in the fire, the Republican was bought by John Y. Scammon; it reappeared on October 12, and continued until March, 1872, when it was succeeded by the Inter Ocean. Complete file in the library of the Boston Athenæum. SDHANÉ

UNITED STATES MEDICAL AND SURGICAL JOURNAL, October, 1865-September, 1874+: A homeopathic journal, published by C. S. Halsey, under the editorial supervision of Dr. George E. Shipman. Its pages record a great advance in the development of the new system of medical practice. In 1871, on behalf of the Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital, Drs. W. Danforth, A. E. Small, and R. Ludlam bought the interest of Mr. Halsey, the publisher. From that time the journal was largely filled with reports of lectures in that school, and with the transactions of the Chicago Academy of Medicine. After the completion of nine volumes it was merged with the Medical Investigator, and became the United States Medical Investigator. HJ

VOICE OF THE FAIR, April 27 or 28-June 24, 1865: A paper issued in the interest of the Northwestern Sanitary Fair. Weekly until May 30, then daily. Edited by Andrew Shuman. File in the library of Boston Athenæum. HC

WESTERN TEMPERANCE ADVOCATE, August 4, 1865 to date (1868): Established as the official organ of the Sons of Temperance, it

- was larger in its ambition and scope than that fact indicates. Rev. J. C. Stoughton was editor until January 30, 1868, when the usual lack of funds caused a new arrangement, whereby T. M. Van Court became publisher; the period of issue was changed from a week to a fortnight, and the publication was "edited 'round" by volunteers. It was apparently soon discontinued. H

WESTERN MONTHLY, January, 1869-December, 1870+: Established by H. V. Reed. It was "intended to be purely an institution of the West : . ." and was expected to "explore the fields of literature and gather the ripe fruits of . . . pioneer talent." After a few months Francis Fisher Browne purchased an interest and joined Mr. Reed in conducting the magazine. Upon Mr. Reed's withdrawal after a time, Mr. Browne became sole director. Under his direction the tone of the magazine became more purely literary than it had been, and the narrow, provincial title, "Western Monthly," was exchanged for one which, without losing the flavor of locality, would "connote a wide interest in the esthetic,"—the Lakeside Monthly. HS

LAKESIDE MONTHLY, + January, 1871-February, 1874: With increased influence and reputation under its new name, which replaced that of Western Monthly, and under the skilful editorial direction of Francis Fisher Browne, the magazine became the nucleus of a large printing and publishing house. This was the Lakeside Publishing and Printing Company, successor to the magazine company that had issued the Western Monthly, and of the printing firm of Church, Goodman, and Donnelley. The success of the Lakeside, which retained a decidedly western character, did much to destroy the indifference that eastern publishers had shown toward western subjects and western literary activity, an indifference that nettled Illinois and western literary editors from James Hall down. "With the advent of the Lakeside," says Mr. Fleming, "Scribner's Monthly, the forerunner of the present Century, began to give attention to western subjects, and to seek the work of western writers. During the years of the Lakeside's growth other eastern publishers began to glean in Mid-West fields, and the competition among them for the virile western productions, which has since become so keen, was fairly on by the time the magazine had reached the zenith of its career." Mr. Browne, sole proprietor and editor, broke down in the spring of 1874, and the magazine suspended publication with the February number. SCH

Upon the death of Mr. Landon in 1879, his widow, Martha J. Landon, became editor and publisher. In October, 1907, she sold the journal to Virginia M. Arford, who is now the editor, with Miss Vera K. Arford as assistant editor. The journal is printed by the Humane Journal Publishing Company of which F. Arford is the manager. H
- INTER OCEAN, March 25, 1872 to date: Established as a daily and weekly by J. Young Scammon as the successor of the Republican (established in 1865 and burned out in the fire of 1871). The weekly edition was begun in 1884. E. W. Halford was its first editor and William Penn Nixon its first business manager. In 1873 Frank W. Palmer, Congressman from Iowa, purchased an interest and became editor. After the panic of 1875 the Inter Ocean Company was succeeded by the Inter Ocean Publishing Company, with William Penn Nixon and Dr. O. W. Nixon as controlling stockholders, the former becoming editor and publisher. Managing editors of note in succession were Gilbert A. Pierce, William E. Curtis, and W. H. Busbey. In 1891 H. H. Kohlsaas bought an interest and became publisher and business manager. In 1894 the Nixons repurchased Mr. Kohlsaas's interest. In 1897 Charles T. Yerkes purchased a controlling interest and George Wheeler Hinman became editor, Mr. Nixon continuing as publisher. In 1907 Mr. Hinman bought the controlling interest in the Inter Ocean and became editor and publisher. Republican—"the only Republican newspaper in Chicago."

KNEIP ZANGE, 1872 to date (1873): A German paper of which Miller and Wagner were editors and publishers in 1873.

LADIES' FRIEND AND SHOPPING GUIDE, 1872(?) to date (1875): Vol. 1, no. 1, of a new series is dated January 1, 1872, and entitled Densmore's Lady's Friend. The title Ladies' Friend and Shopping Guide apparently belonged to the old series. The newspaper directories for 1873-1875 give the paper as Lady's Friend. It appears to have been weekly in 1872, monthly, 1873-1875. In 1872 J. A. Densmore was editor, J. A. Densmore and Company were publishers, and Laura M. Hubbard was "fashion editress". The paper contained a literary department especially for ladies, essays on education, household management, art, music, etc. "It shall be our aim to influence for good the fair readers . . . and through them their husbands, fathers, sons and brothers." In 1873 and 1874 J. A. Densmore was editor and publisher. The Lady's Friend Publishing Company were editors and publishers in 1875. H

DAILY LAW BULLETIN, June 4, 1872-1900(?). H

LEDGER, 1872 to date: A literary and family magazine, published weekly. Although the "Ledger Company" is the name given to the firm of editors and publishers, Samuel H. Williams was really the editor for almost twenty years. W. Scott McComas was associated with him in 1880. In 1891 W. D. Boyce acquired the Chicago Ledger, and the W. D. Boyce Company have been editors and publishers to date. Begun in connection with a newspaper plate supply business and in imitation of the New York Ledger, in the first few years it made a feature of stories of a good class. Since the late seventies, however, it has deteriorated in literary tone. The sensational, although not immoral, character of the Ledger stories, and the use that the large mail-order houses have made of its advertising columns, have given this paper an unusually long life and extensive circulation.

- CHICAGO ALLIANCE, December 13, 1873-March, 1882+: A non-sectarian weekly founded by a group of clergymen including Prof. David Swing, Rev. Robert Collyer, Dr. Hiram A. Thomas and others. With a slightly religious trend in its material, it was devoted in the main to literature, particularly that of the essay form. In its beginning Rev. J. B. McClure was managing editor; the other editorial work was shared by all. But one by one the editors withdrew, before long leaving Prof. Swing as editor-in-chief and chief contributor. His weekly sermon-essay was the leading literary feature throughout the existence of the paper. In 1874 the Alliance Publishing Company was the name by which the group of editors and publishers was designated. In 1875 this company is named as publishers, while the list of editors given includes Prof. Swing, Rev. C. D. Helmer, H. W. Thomas, D.D., H. N. Powers, D.D., and Prof. William Mathews. H. L. Ensign was the business manager. Professor Swing's name appears as that of editor again in 1876. In 1877 Mr. McClure disposed of his interest. In the same year Francis F. Browne became literary editor, and A. H. Huling took charge of the political department. In 1878 Rev. Z. S. Holbrook purchased an interest and assisted Professor Swing. Browne and Huling soon retired and Mr. Holbrook sold to Henry L. Shepard, who in 1879 and 1880 was filling the position of editor. Dixon and Shepard are named as publishers in 1879, and the Alliance Association in 1881. The failure of the paper early in 1882 is said to have been due to the unscrupulousness of the business manager. A consolidation with the Western Magazine was effected in March, and the new periodical appeared as the Weekly Magazine (see Western Magazine). The title Chicago Alliance was changed to Alliance in third volume and in the next volume to Alliance and Radical Review. HC

AMERICAN ANTIQUARIAN, 1878-1881+ : Established and edited by Stephen D. Peet. After the first three volumes the name of the paper was changed to American Antiquarian and Oriental Journal, which has continued to date. It was published as a quarterly until 1884, since when it has been bi-monthly. Its interests are literary and scientific. It has dealt mainly with the prehistoric works and races of America, also to less extent with those of Europe, Asia, and Africa. The co-operation of European and American archæologists, distinguished in both biblical and classical lines of work, has secured the journal a means of maintaining a scientific basis for all that it publishes. Its pages are illustrated. In 1880 Jameson and Morse were publishers. Mr. Peet is now his own publisher.

FARM, FIELD, AND FIRESIDE, 1878-1906+: An agricultural monthly, founded by R. L. V. Powis. Thomas W. Herringshaw was publisher in 1879. Thomas Owen, Jr., and Frederick Hankohl were editors in 1880, and the Farm, Field, and Fireside Publishing Company were publishers. By 1885 the name had been changed to Farm, Field, and Stockman, and the paper was being published by a stock company of which Powis was president. Gen. Charles H. Howard and James W. Wilson bought the paper from Powis in the fall of 1885. From that time until 1900 the Howard and Wilson Publishing Company issued the paper, with General Howard as principal owner and controlling editor. Upon acquiring the Farm, Field, and Stockman in 1885, the publishers immediately changed it to a weekly. Under the same name it was published until 1893, when the title was changed back to Farm, Field, and Fireside. In 1894 the Western Rural, a weekly, which had been published some twenty years by Milton George, was purchased by the Howard and Wilson Publishing Company. The two weeklies were published by this company until 1900, when the business interests were divided. James W. Wilson took the Western Rural, sold his holdings in the publishing company, and it ceased to exist. The Howard Company purchased the Farm, Field, and Fireside and continued its publication till May, 1905. The president of this company and business manager was Otis McGaw Howard, son of General C. H. Howard, who was the treasurer. The secretary and associate editor was Miss Nina F. Howard. The Farm, Field, and Fireside Monthly was also published by the same company from 1899 to 1905. Among those who were connected with the paper a number of years as agricultural editors were Jonathan Periam, P. H. Jacobs, Wm. B. Lloyd, and Allan S. Neilson. The paper was sold to Wm. A. Radford in 1905 and in 1906 it was changed to a monthly and combined with another paper and the name changed to the National Monthly Farm Press edited by Herbert Shearer. U

WESTERN COLLEGE MAGAZINE, 1879-January, 1906+: A monthly, devoted to inter-collegiate interests. In January, 1906, the name was changed to the American Educational Review, and the scope of the magazine broadened to include a treatment of the progress of higher education throughout the country. The magazine is published by the American Educational Company.

WESTERN CONFECTIONER AND BAKER, January, 1879 to date: A trade monthly. This paper was started in 1875 as a price list for a supply house. It gradually developed until it passed out of the hands of the supply house, and in January, 1879, appeared as a journal of instructive matter and general news to both confectionery and baking interests. J. Thompson Gill was editor and publisher, 1879-1880. Later, the Thompson Publishing Concern bought the paper, which it has edited and published to date, with T. O. Thompson as editor and manager. For several years past it has been devoted mainly to confectionery interests. The name seems to have become Confectioner and Baker after some years of the paper's existence.

WESTERN DRUGGIST, 1879 to date: A monthly, devoted to pharmaceutical interests. G. P. Engelhard and Company have been editors and publishers from 1879 to date. (See Pharmacist.)

WESTERN EDUCATIONAL JOURNAL, 1879 to date (1881): A monthly educational journal. J. Fred Waggoner was editor and publisher in 1880.

WESTERN MAGAZINE, +1879-March, 1882+: It had been founded three years before at Omaha. Upon its being brought to Chicago, Mrs. Helen Elkin Starrett became the editor. It was, according to the sub-title, "a literary monthly." It contained departments designated as "Original" and "Eclectic," devoted to literary and historical matters; also, later, a department called the "Club," consecrated to social and economic interests. The broad and progressive policy of the magazine won general approval, and when by merging with the Alliance in 1882 it added Rev. David Swing to its list of regular contributors, its outlook was more than ever promising. The Weekly Magazine published its first number May 6, 1882, announcing that "We have believed from the first that there is need and a demand for a low-priced periodical to supply a kind of reading differing like the magazine from the newspaper in its greater deliberateness and earnestness, and yet without those qualities of cumbrousness and extensiveness common to the magazines." Although many contributors of high rank were engaged, under the same business management that ruined the Alliance, the new Weekly Magazine ended its career in bankruptcy in 1884. WH

WESTERN STATIONER AND PRINTER, 1879- —(?) : Published by J. Sawtell Ford.

WESTERN UNDERTAKER, 1879 to date: A monthly devoted to undertaking, embalming, funeral directing, sanitation, and kindred subjects. Published by the F. H. Hill Company until it was purchased by Herbert S. Fassett, who has been editor and publisher since March, 1897.

YOUTH'S EVANGELIST AND LITTLE PREACHER, 1879(?)- —(?): A Sunday school paper. Rev. A. T. McDill was editor; Morrison, McCoy and McDill were publishers. Several scattered numbers for 1879 in the Chicago Historical Society library are included in volume 21, thus fixing the date of establishment as 1859. Since this paper is nowhere found dated earlier than 1879, it seems probable that it was founded elsewhere and moved to Chicago in the late seventies. H

ILLINOIS ADVOCATE, +February, 1831-1832+: Established, edited, published by John York Sawyer and Jonathan Angevine, the establishment passed into the hands of John York Sawyer. J. Angevine was associated with Mr. Sawyer for a year. When Mr. Angevine retired, William Peach became a partner, Sawyer removed the establishment in December, 1832, to Vandalia, the State capital. Mr. Sawyer merged the Western Plowboy in the Advocate, and in 1839 the paper was removed to Springfield. Sturdily Democratic-Republican in politics (See State Register.) HM

WESTERN PLOUGHBOY, January 1, 1831-January 17, 1832: An agricultural paper edited and published by John York Sawyer, and issued semi-monthly, except that one month elapsed between the second and third numbers. Twenty-five numbers of eight two-column pages were issued, after which the paper was merged in the Advocate, one page of which was thereafter given up to such agricultural matters as had previously appeared in the Plowboy. This was the second agricultural paper issued west of the Alleghanies; it was the first in Illinois. "When it is recollected that only one agricultural paper (the Western Tiller) is printed west of the Alleghanies, and that most of the works on agriculture treat generally on the manner of improving the soil rather than selecting the most profitable crop, it will be seen that we have engaged in no trifling affair." (Item, March 12, 1832.) The paper was printed by S. S. Brooks in the Advocate office. A file, lacking the first number, is in the library at the University of Illinois. MU

PRAIRIE PIONEER, 1858-1866: Published and edited in 1858 by Joe M. Pryor, who retired February 2, 1859. William Lloyd Carter began publishing the paper February 22, 1859, and was succeeded in the editorial chair by J. D. Lichtenberger, October 20, 1859. Miles B. Friend was for a short time in partnership with Carter, March, 1859. March 15, 1860, Theodore Edmondson became the publisher and W. L. Carter was again editor. Edmondson was succeeded as publisher by Benson T. Atherton, August, 1860. October 12, 1862, the Pioneer suspended publication, to be revived by J. D. Lichtenberger. Then Atherton again tried to make it live, but September, 1863, practically closed its career. In 1862, however, Dr. Sibley had purchased Lichtenberger's interest, and, associating with himself R. B. Schell, continued the paper off and on till 1866, "on a red hot loyal platform".

WAR DEMOCRAT, January, 1864-1866+: Established by C. I. Wilmans, who in February, 1864, associated C. W. Sibley in the publication. The paper was Democratic but favored the war. Wilmans retired early, leaving Sibley in charge, but returned as Sibley's associate, August, 1864, and remained until February, 1865. C. W. Sibley was succeeded in 1865 by his father, C. Sibley, who in the same year sold to D. W. Barkley. January, 1866, Barkley took Revill into partnership and changed the name to

WAYNE COUNTY PRESS, +1866 to date: Under Barkley and Revill, the paper was neutral in politics. Revill retired and Barkley associated with himself his brother, O. F. Barkley. After a time D. W. Barkley purchased his brother's interest. Under Barkley the Press left its neutral ground, and became, especially in 1868, a strong Republican organ. After this, however, and until 1876, it was a "Granger." It returned in 1876 to the Republican party. On July 2, 1887, Mr. Barkley sold the paper to W. M. Goudy and O. F. Barkley, the latter selling his interest to Mr. Goudy in May, 1889. Mr. Goudy sold October 4, 1909, to E. H. Childress and W. M. Knodell. Mr. Childress is editor.

DEMOCRAT, 1868-1881+: Established by George W. Bates and Mr. Holmes, July 3, 1868. The office had been purchased and brought to Fairfield by R. F. Brown, who abandoned the enterprise before it was fairly launched. It was then run successively by John Moffit, C. J. Wilmans, Isaac M. Stanley, R. B. Schell, Miles B. Friend, and Joe V. Baugh; 1871-1872, C. E. Sibley and R. B. Schell were proprietors. In 1875, Brown came into possession again, and sold the paper to Oliver Holmes. After changing hands frequently it was sold finally by Wilmans to Ed. McClung in 1881, when the paper was consolidated with the Record.

JOURNAL, November, 1872 to date: Established by John S. Harper.

After two years, it was bought by O. J. Smith and J. R. Robinson, who made it the organ of the Granger element. Before issuing any numbers of the paper these gentlemen sold out to W. L. Glessner, whose brother, L. C. Glessner, then took a half interest and assumed charge of the paper. The first issue by the Glessners was October 15, 1874. In June, 1877, L. C. Glessner bought his brother's interest and had sole charge until February, 1879, when the office was moved to Carlinville, Macoupin county, whence the paper was issued as the Herald. The Journal was continued after 1879 by W. C. Devore. In 1887 it was sold by Mr. Devore to M. V. Zimmerman, who in November, 1891, sold it to E. A. and C. L. Wood. In June, 1893, E. A. Wood sold to W. C. Devore, who in 1894 sold to C. L. Wood. In 1895 Mr. Wood sold to F. S. Nutt and B. B. Bates. Mr. Nutt died in November, 1896, and was succeeded by his brother S. E. Nutt, who in March, 1897, sold to E. A. Williams. The present proprietors of the Journal are Williams and Bates. It was independent in politics with a slight Democratic tendency under Glessner. In 1882 it was the recognized organ of Republicanism in northern DeWitt county. Files for ten years at the office.

HERALD, September, 1873-1875: Established by W. C. Devore and Paul J. Clifford, who sold out after two years to Whetzell Brothers. They continued the paper six weeks and then moved it to Lovington, Moultrie county, there issuing the Lovington Index. After six months Devore reassumed possession and continued the paper as the Lovington Free Press until 1879, when he returned to Farmer City and revived the Journal, as above stated.

KASKASKIA, RANDOLPH COUNTY

ILLINOIS HERALD, 1814¹-1816+: The first paper in Illinois, published by Matthew Duncan,² printer to the territory and publisher of the laws of the Union to 1815; Robert Blackwell and Daniel ¹ Vol. 1, no. 30. is dated December 13, 1814. If the paper was regularly issued and numbered, it must therefore have been begun June 24, 1814. But an advertisement in the one number extant is dated May 28, 1814.

² Matthew Duncan, the first printer in Illinois, was an elder brother of Governor Joseph Duncan. He was born in Kentucky; after graduation from Yale College, he returned to his native state, and for a time edited a paper at Russellville entitled the Mirror, which had been established November 1, 1806. From that he became editor of Farmer's Friend, begun in the same town in 1809. Ninian Edwards, first territorial governor of Illinois, had been a lawyer at Russellville and was his friend. Through him Duncan secured the printing of the first edition of the Illinois Territorial Laws, issued from his press in 1813. In the next year Duncan moved his printing establishment to Kaskaskia and began the Illinois Herald. In December of 1814 he issued the first pamphlet published in Illinois, and in June, 1815, the first book, volume one of "Pope's Digest." Having sold his paper to Daniel P. Cook and Robert Blackwell in 1817, Duncan abandoned journalism and entered the army, in which he rose to some prominence, and saw active service in the Black Hawk War. On October 4, 1832, he was made captain of Rangers, and in 1833 became captain of the First Dragoons. After four years of service he resigned from the army and went into business at Shelbyville, where he died on January 16, 1844. (Julia Duncan Kirby, Joseph Duncan, Fergus Hist. Ser. no. 21, Chicago, 1888. Reuben Gold Thwaites, The Ohio Valley Press before the War of 1812-15, p. 43.)

P. Cook, 1815-1817. In 1817 Elijah C. Berry became a co-editor. A small sheet, with four columns to the page, and largely given over to the printing of official documents. In the hands of Blackwell and Cook, state printers, the name was changed to S

REPUBLICAN ADVOCATE, February 27, 1823-March 2, 1824+: A pro-slavery paper established and nominally edited by R. K. Fleming. Elias Kent Kane seems to have been the real editor until he was elected to the Senate in 1824, after which time John Reynolds was probably in control. The paper was in favor of a convention in 1824 and of slavery, but was open to letters against both causes. It supported Crawford. With the number for January 22, 1824, the editorship passed to William Orr, who changed the title to F

KASKASKIA REPUBLICAN, +March 9, 1824-1825(?): William Orr was editor and gave ardent support to the convention party. The paper was still being published in October, but was temporarily discontinued, probably in 1825. After a period of suspension it was revived as ASF

ILLINOIS REPORTER, 1826-1829(?): William Orr was editor. He denied affiliation with any party in the State, and felt impelled to rally the virtuous and intelligent to the standard of another party. Apparently his rally was not successful, for he sold to Sidney Breeze within a few months—in June or July. Under Breeze the paper supported the administration and Daniel P. Cook, though Breeze had been a Jackson man. L. O. Schrader was Breeze's publisher for a while, and was probably succeeded in 1828 by R. K. Fleming. A

WESTERN DEMOCRAT, August 19, 1829-1830+: Established by R. K. Fleming. Hooper Warren announced, in the Galena Advertiser for August 31, receipt of the first number, saying, "This is the sixth paper now published in Illinois." The editorial address included, "As we published, in this state, pending the late presidential canvass, the only paper which took a decided stand in favor of the successful competitor for the first office in the nation, it will scarcely be expected by those who were, of right, in the opposition, that we should now retrace our steps . . . etc." Although Fleming was printer, and the only person whose name appeared on the paper, it is clear that Sidney Breeze was really editor. He wrote to Ninian Edwards September 21, 1830: "If I remain in politics I am determined to make Gov. Reynolds choose between Smith and myself, in other words between the Crisis and Democrat. . . . Do give your views of them, editorially, thro' me, in the Democrat." The paper supported Reynolds for governor. Title changed to A

KASKASKIA DEMOCRAT, + January 2, 1830-1831: In the issue for November 27, 1830 (vol. 2, no. 9) the editor announced that the paper had 300 subscribers. In the Western Ploughboy for January 24, 1832, a news item reveals that "the Kaskaskia Democrat has been discontinued." A file, in two bound volumes, was in the library of Judge Sidney Breeze at the time of his death, but it has not been recently located. AM lard sold the paper to J. C. Robinson and Jacob Zimmerman, who also purchased the TELEGRAPH, July 3, 1852-1858: A Whig paper edited by Joseph G. Jones and published by S. P. Farley and J. G. Jones. Before the end of the first year S. F. Andrews and J. K. Carr, then Charles Summers and J. Zimmerman were publishers, with Summers as editor. Combined with Illinois State Journal to form the Eastern Illinoisan in 1853. One source of information says that the Telegraph was revived in April or May of 1854 by J. K. Carr and S. F. Andrews, but the scattering numbers through 1853, 1854, and 1855 indicate no break. Andrews and Carr seem to have continued through 1855, then Andrews alone. J. K. Carr retired in the fall of 1854, and Andrews conducted the paper in the support of the Republican party until 1858. SHF

EASTERN ILLINOISAN, +1853-1865: J. C. Robinson and J. Zimmerman were editors and publishers in 1854. From 1856 to 1861, S. S. Whitehead was proprietor. Edward L'Hote was publisher in 1858. For a few months in 1861 it was run by H. H. Peyton, who finally entered the army and Mr. Whitehead was forced to assume control. He continued its publication until 1865 when it was purchased by John Littlefield and its publication suspended for thirteen years. After its revival it became a Democratic paper, edited by B. F. Ward. It was later absorbed by Clark County Democrat, now published by Bennett and Barber and edited by Norman Bennett. HF

ILLINOIS STATE DEMOCRAT, February 10, 1849-1852(?): J. M. Crane was editor, Crane and N. Willard were publishers. In 1852 N. Willard was publisher, editor, and proprietor. SUH

JOURNAL, 1858-1859: Started by N. O. McKeen and John A. Whitlock in the interest of the Republican party. Edited for a while by Whitlock alone; then as an Independent paper by W. S. Goodell. Absorbed in the fall of 1859 by the Illinoisan.

HORNET, 1860: Established by E. L'Hote; J. R. Bulion, editor. Republican. H

FLAG OF OUR UNION, 1861-1864(?): Established by John Littlefield, a man with "Know Nothing" sympathies, but conducted as favoring the preservation of the Union. It ran through three volumes. It seems that he discontinued this paper when he bought Eastern Illinoisan.

MESSENGER, 1865 to date (1891): John Littlefield was editor and Chess Littlefield publisher in 1866, but the latter soon withdrew. By 1874 Ham and Eth Sutton were editors and publishers and continued so in 1875; but in 1876 John Littlefield was again running the paper. In the early 80's Charles Littlefield became associated with his father in the business, and eventually succeeded him. By 1891, Charles Littlefield had become editor and publisher. The paper was absorbed later by Clark County Democrat. Independent. H

CLARK COUNTY HERALD, August 1868 to date: Established by M. O. Frost. In 1882 he sold to L. S. Kilborn and Son. In 1895 the Messrs. Kilborn sold to G. C. Harner, who, after a few months, sold back to them. They continued publication until May 1, 1900, when they sold to George O. Baird and Company, who in turn sold to Charles Scott. Republican. H

CHURCH PROGRESS, 1878-1884: Established by Rev. Charles Kuhlman as a monthly, local, Catholic organ; became semi-monthly in 1880, and weekly in 1882. In 1884 or 1885 it was moved to St. Louis, where it is still published.

Manly, with Judge Green as political editor. Mr. Green made it Republican. In 1862 Manly died and George W. Douglas took the paper, made it a Democratic organ, and Richard Beck who succeeded him made it Republican again. In 1867 Mr. Green, at public auction, purchased it, but Mr. Beck continued to publish it until sold to J. P. M. Calvo. It was suspended for an interval, 1867-1868. Messrs. Wade and Cape revived it in 1868. They soon sold it to C. I. Wilmans, who ran it until 1870, when he sold to T. J. Groves. In a few weeks Mr. Groves passed it back to Mr. Wilmans. J. H. Wilmans was editor, 1871; Wilmans and Havill, 1875-1878. Under the Bell Brothers the paper was non-partisan. In 1878 Mr. Havill made it an exponent of Democratic principles. It was sold by Frank W. Havill to P. J. Kolb and A. E. Smith, in November, 1906. These men continued to publish the paper until February, 1908, when it was incorporated under the name of the Mt. Carmel Register Company; A. E. Smith continued as editor. A daily was begun in 1900. Files substantially complete in the office. A

SHAWNEETOWN, GALLATIN COUNTY

SHAWNEE CHIEF,¹ October 17–November (?), 1818+: Established by Henry Eddy and Singleton H. Kimmel. In a short time the name was changed to

ILLINOIS EMIGRANT, +(before December 26, 1818)–September 18, 1819+: Published by Eddy and Kimmel and edited by Eddy. This, the second paper in Illinois, was a four-page, four-column sheet, well printed in the early years. In the issue for April 3, 1819, is a criticism of Governor Bond for signing the law establishing a state bank, and for becoming president of it. The last issue was vol. 1, no. 54, September 18, 1819. With the next number the name was changed to AE

ILLINOIS GAZETTE, +September 25, 1819–1830(?): The paper was continued by Eddy and Kimmel until May 22, 1820, when the partnership was dissolved and James Hall took the place of Kimmel as partner in the publishing, and as editor. This arrangement continued until November 16, 1822, when Hall withdrew; with the number for November 23 C. Jones became publisher and Henry Eddy editor and proprietor. Eddy sold a half interest to John Foliart, who became publisher, with Eddy, as John Foliart and Company, on February 11, 1826. They sold October 18, 1828, to Alexander F. Grant, who conducted the paper alone until November 8, then, with Thomas Palmer, as Alex F. Grant and Company until November 20, 1830; then Grant alone became publisher. The last number in the Library of Congress is vol. 10, no. 30, December 18, 1830, and is probably near the end of the paper's career. Under Eddy and Kimmel the Gazette was alive and fairly vigorous. Hall made it perhaps the best edited paper in the state, with the possible exception of the Edwardsville Spectator. He preserved a neutral position in politics for some time, and at all times kept the columns open to discussion. But after he became familiar with state politics the political tone was vigorous.² Hall gave the paper a very unusual literary tone. Under subsequent editors its qualities deteriorated to insignificance. MSAE

GALLATIN DEMOCRAT AND ILLINOIS ADVERTISER, October–December, 1835: Established by McClernand and Stickney. Democratic. McClernand withdrew at the end of the year, and the paper was continued as Danville

SANGAMON JOURNAL, November 10, 1831-1855+: It appeared weekly from November 10, 1831, to June 13, 1848. It appeared first as a daily on Monday, June 13, 1848, and has since been issued both daily and weekly, under the various titles of Sangamo Journal, Sangamon Journal, and Illinois State Journal. The title Sangamon Journal was retained from the beginning till January 12, 1832, when, with no. 11, it was changed to Sangamo Journal. This paper supported the Whig party, thus favoring a national bank, protective tariff, and internal improvements. From the birth of the Republican party the Journal supported its principles. Published by Simeon and Josiah Francis, 1831-1835; Simeon Francis, 1835-1838; Simeon, Allen and J. Newton Francis, 1838-1843; Simeon and Allen Francis, 1843-1855; W. H. Bailhache and Edward L. ILLINOIS REPUBLICAN, 1835-1839: A Democrat paper; supported Jackson's policy; was merged into the Illinois State Register in 1839. It was edited and published by John L. Roberts and George R. Weber. Stephen A. Douglas contributed to its columns. A mob, one of which was the sheriff of the county, attacked the office twice, but was repelled by the Weber Brothers.

ILLINOIS STATE REGISTER, + August 10(?), 1839, to date: Established by John York Sawyer, at Edwardsville as Illinois Advocate. It was published at Springfield by Wm. Walters and George R. Weber as editors and publishers until 1845. Mr. Walters and Charles H. Lanphier were editors and publishers, 1845-1846. On the death of Mr. Walters in July, 1846, Mr. Lanphier became editor and owner. He and George Walker were its editors and publishers, June 4, 1847-1858. On January 2, 1849, the Daily Illinois State Register was first issued. Mr. Walker having died, Mr. Lanphier and Edward Conner edited and published the paper in 1858-1859, Mr. Lanphier becoming sole proprietor late in 1859, and so continued until November 24, 1863. During 1860, the late Congressman William M. Springer, edited the paper. Mr. Lanphier's connection with the Illinois State Register closed in 1863, when it was suspended for a few months. It was revived by the Illinois State Register Publishing Company under the business management of George Judd and was edited by I. N. Higgins. On November 12, 1864, the paper was again suspended. On January 1, 1865, John W. Merritt and sons, Edward L. and Joseph D., became proprietors and revived the paper with John W. Merritt as editor-in-chief and Edward L. Merritt as his associate editor. January 1, 1866, Edward L. and Joseph D. Merritt became proprietors under the firm name of E. L. Merritt and Brother. In 1873 John W. Merritt was succeeded as editor by Edward L. Merritt. In 1877 the Merritt Brothers sold the paper to an incorporated company, composed of John M. Palmer, John Mayo Palmer, Edward L. Mer-

- ritt and James M. Higgins. In 1880 this company sold the property to G. W. and J. R. Weber, sons of George R. Weber, who was connected with it in 1839, and Charles Edwards, John H. Oberly, and G. R. Weber edited it. Soon afterwards the paper was turned over to a trustee. Early in 1881 John M. Palmer bid it in on a sale and then sold it to George Smith, H. W. Clendenin, and Thomas Rees of Keokuk, Iowa, who issued their first number of June 19, 1881, under the firm name of Smith, Clendenin and Rees. Mr. Smith died in 1886 and the proprietorship was then placed in an incorporated company composed of H. W. Clendenin, Thomas Rees, and the heirs of Mr. Smith, the title being the Illinois State Register Company. A few years thereafter the Smith interest was purchased by the company controlled by Messrs. Clendenin and Rees, which is its present owner. Mr. Clendenin has been editor-in-chief since 1881, and Mr. Rees has been business manager during the same time. The Illinois State Register has been a Democratic paper since 1836, when Mr. Walters assumed its publication. EDBJAHSUF

January, 1833, Judge Hall moved to Cincinnati, where he published The Western Monthly Magazine, a Continuation of the Illinois Monthly Magazine until December, 1835. Hall was the chief contributor, and in such articles as Notes on Illinois, People and Manners, and Customs of the West, and in essays on educational topics, stories such as The Missionaries, The Indian Wife's Lament, The Money Diggers, and many poems, he realized the ideal suggested in an article on Periodicals which he published in the number for April, 1831: "Our editors have become too formal and stately, and fastidious. . . . Instead of the infinite variety of topics, which once gave interest to works of this description, nothing is now admitted but reviews, tales and poetry. . . . Nothing will go down but trifles, cold, formal, and empty. . . . I am much better pleased with the good old-fashioned magazines . . . within whose well furnished pages, the reader, whatever might be his taste, was sure to find something agreeable." Among those who helped to satisfy in the pages of the Monthly the varied tastes of Illinoisans were Morris Birkbeck, John M. Peck, Governor Edward Coles, Dr. Asa Fitch, George Russell, and Salmon P. Chase. "The Illinois Monthly Magazine was one of the most typical of the western journals," remarks William C. Cairns, in his monograph On the Development of American Literature from 1815 to 1833. "Raw and crude as the West was, there is a fin de siècle tone to these publications that is not found in the eastern magazines." Vol. 1 is in the Champaign Public Library. HL

AH

FREE PRESS AND ILLINOIS WHIG, +1837-1841(?): William Hodge was editor and publisher until the fall of 1839, when Hodge and Abbott were publishers. The paper was suspended for a while in the fall of 1839. It seems that James Kennaday bought the paper in 1841 and discontinued it for about two years.
H

FREEMAN, June, 1842-—(?): Edited and published by James Kennaday. This paper was violently opposed to Ford's candidacy for governor. It accused him of being a Mormon sympathiser and in favor of transferring fourteen northern counties to Wisconsin, that they might escape the state debt. Duncan was its candidate. Probably short lived, or became Free Press.
A

FREE PRESS, 1843-—(?): A revival of the earlier Free Press. James Kennaday was publisher, Q. C. Alexander and James Kennaday editors until July 20, 1844, when Alexander withdrew. Violently Whig.
H

OLIVE LEAF, 1843-1845: Edited by Kellam and Lothrop. It was a Baptist journal but also had a secular department.

ILLINOIS SENTINEL, November 8, 1839-1846(?): Edited by John McDonald. Democratic.
A

BAPTIST HELMET, November 8, 1844-1845(?): Established by S. K. Kellam, who at first was editor and publisher. E. W. Young soon became associated with Kellam in publishing the Helmet. According to its motto, the paper was "devoted to religious truth and practical godliness." It gave much space to general news, and was unusually moderate and sane.

- FAYETTE YEOMAN AND RAILROAD JOURNAL, June 23, 1849-(after May 3, 1851): Established, edited, and published by James Kennaday. Eminently insipid. It was friendly to the administration, but shows no traces of political interest. Before No. 19 the title was changed by dropping and Railroad Journal. H
- AGE OF STEAM AND FIRE, 1852-1854+(?): Edited and published in August, 1853, by H. P. H. Bromwell, who either discontinued it or changed the title to Age of Steam. F
- AGE OF STEAM, April 9, 1854-1855+: Apparently established by H. P. H. Bromwell, it was by the seventh number published by Morras and Russell, with W. P. Morras as editor. Then Morras withdrew, and after a brief suspension Thomas J. Russell alone continued the publication with no. 9, which appeared July 15, 1854, until after June 23, 1855. Disclaiming political partisanship, the paper showed Whig tendencies, but was especially notable for its distinctly literary tone. It is said in the history of Fayette county that the paper passed into the possession of H. P. H. Bromwell, who styled it Age of Steam and Fire,¹ and that he later sold to Tevis Greathouse, who changed the name to H
- FAYETTE OBSERVER, +1855-1862: Edited by Tevis Greathouse (with a brief intermission during which time it was edited by Mr. Davis), 1855-1859; Messrs. Sturgess and Hickman, 1859-1862. It represented Democracy until 1860 when it became Republican. F
- FAYETTE DEMOCRAT, 1858 to date: Founded by some leading Democrats of the place, and placed under the management of Messrs. Carman and Flynn. The publication was very irregular until it came into the hands of Charles G. Smith in 1863. Charles G. Smith and Son are the present editors and publishers.
- VANDALIAN, February 27, 1858-—(?): Edited and published by G. B. Miller and N. C. Davis. F
- UNION, April, 1864 to date: Established by H. S. Humphrey. In 1868 Humphrey sold a half interest to Will Richards. They sold in 1887 to Lon S. Matherly and J. F. Sayles, who sold in 1893 to T. N., Ira D., and Jesse Lakin, who under the name of T. N. Lakin and Sons still conduct the paper. Republican. H
- FAYETTE COUNTY NEWS, February, 1878-1881: H. R. Miller was editor and publisher. Sold after nearly three years to Rudolph Ernst, who removed it. Republican. H
- ILLINOIS MEDICAL RECORDER, 1878-1880: R. E. Beach, M.D., was editor and publisher in 1879. Medical monthly.

¹This statement in the county history is probably erroneous. Existing numbers of the two papers show that Age of Steam and Fire preceded Age of Steam. A second change is improbable.—F. W. S.

OBSERVER, April 12, 1848-1849: A Democratic paper established "by Henry H. Hall, and two or three other young men, for the advancement of the town." Mark W. Delahay was editor, and A. S. Tilden after a time did the rest of the work connected with issuing the paper, John J. Ingalls assisted Delahay for a few weeks. At the end of a year the plant was sold to Tilden, who removed it to Naples. U

OWL, 1848-1849: A scandal-mongering "society" paper published in the winter of 1848-1849 by a compositor named Dedrich.

CASS COUNTY TIMES, September 9, 1856-1859: Established by Richard S. Thomas as a neutral in politics to promote the interests of a proposed railroad of which he was president. He sold early in 1858 to John Bradley Thompson, who employed Rev. J. S. McDowell to edit, and Robert M. Taggart to publish the sheet. This arrangement continued until late in 1858, when Thompson sold to Taggart. In the fall of 1859 the paper was suspended and the plant reverted to Thomas, who sold it to Hezekiah Naylor.

CASS COUNTY INDEPENDENT, January, 1860-April, 1861: Established by Hezekiah Naylor and Lafayette Briggs. At first the paper was neutral in politics, but Briggs soon withdrew to permit Naylor to make it radically Republican. R. S. Thomas was at this time, according to Dr. John F. Snyder, editor sub-rosa. The paper suspended publication in April, 1861, and was removed by Naylor to Pekin.

- CASS COUNTY UNION, August, 1860-1864: Founded by Democrats, including Jacob Dunaway, Jacob Ward, William Petefish; edited and managed by Lafayette Briggs. Briggs left the paper in 1863 and was succeeded by Stearns DeWitt Rich, who stayed by the paper until its death in the spring of 1864.
- CASS COUNTY DEMOCRAT, May 8, 1866-1868+: Established by M. B. Friend, editor and publisher, backed by N. B. Beers, Sam Petefish, and "Bill" Easley. After six months M. B. Friend and Charles H. Whitaker were publishers and proprietors, but Whitaker soon passed on. In June, 1867, Friend sold to James A. Martin, and the paper was then issued by Martin and John W. Gill. Gill soon disappeared. O. T. Roderick became publisher, J. K. Vandemark, editor. Roderick and Vandemark soon disappeared. Martin withdrew his support as "proprietor," and N. B. Beers and Company leased the establishment to J. G. Fuss and J. N. Gridley. Fuss was editor and Gridley business manager. To avoid complications with Martin, who indicated a desire to continue a paper under the title of Democrat, the name was changed by Fuss and Gridley to
